(1840-1911)

This stylish decanter reflects the study of plants and organic form undertaken by European designers formulating the Art Nouveau style. The plant forms have been successfully translated into flowing curvilinear elements. The European Art Nouveau style, was, however, somewhat foreign-appearing to suit American taste, and preferred recognizable, non-abstract forms. One solution was to use the soft, rounded feet of small porcelain vases, lifting the decanter from the table surface. The designers were to employ similar devices in jardinières and compotes.

However, the Gorham Manufacturing as its market for Martele silver. Instead, this attracted the most affluent clients of America's quality but were not necessarily intellectuals, comfortable and acceptable while anything is confrontational and too challenging. Hand-in-affluent tend to be conservative, avoiding obvious. Obviously, both of these factors were in place and thus presented Codman and Holbrook a product that was stylish, elegant and new whose solution was to present a version of the Art Nouveau modification of its European elements. That Art Nouveau style was both a marketing and a part of the American Art Nouveau idiom: a contribution in metal to the United States is recognized until recently.

Codman and Holbrook correctly judge examples of Martele only if they were not too and not too unfamiliar to the purchaser. The modernism of the French Art Nouveau style, the Paris Métro stations by Hector Guimard, too foreign to be acceptable to American taste, was conventional American taste, which desired without its European extremes. The solution, Art Nouveau style with more conservative American-associated designers was to place familiar but relatively familiar curvilinear forms and their decorative principles (Fig. 3, catalogue number line were given undulating, rippling edges with ornament of flowers, birds and foliage. Magnificent Marvelous Martele American Art Nouveau Silver The Jolie And Robert Shelton Collection:

Magnificent, Marvelous Martelé John Webster Keefe, Samuel J. Hough, 2001 The Martele line of handwrought silver in the Art Nouveau style by the Gorham Manufacturing Company is justly regarded as a major expression of that style on this side of the Atlantic. Officially introduced at the influential Paris Exposition Universelle of 1900 Martele silver was widely admired and was awarded a Grand Prix and many gold medals. The excitement created then by the new artistic line of Martele silver has been rekindled by this premiere exhibition of nearly three hundred works from the collection of Jolie and Robert Shelton. The mammoth and highly regarded Gorham Company developed from a small jewelry manufactory founded by Jabez Gorham 1792-1869 in Providence Rhode Island to the world's largest producer of sterling silver wares. In the process of this growth the company distinguished itself by successfully combining new technological advances in the industry with exemplary design. So successful was Gorham in the closing years of the nineteenth century that it could devote considerable time, money, and expertise to create an art line of hollowware produced entirely by hand. The new line in the latest cutting edge taste departed dramatically from Gorham's flourishing line of machine-made commercial flatware and hollowwares. It was named Martele from the French verb marteeler the hammer. The line probably never would have come into existence without the driving influence and vision of two men: Gorham's energetic chief executive Edward Holbrook 1849-1919 and its chief designer William Christmas Codman 1839-1923. To connoisseurs of silver Codman is justly renowned for the development of the lavish Martele line starting with designs in 1896 and commencing a limited production in 1897.

Still Shining Diane Rademacher, 2003 A description of lost buildings from the 1904 World's Fair. The bulk of the book is descriptions and pictures. The Craftsman and the Critic Beverly Kay Brandt, 2009 When English craftsman poet and socialist William Morris advised consumers in the 1880s to have nothing in your houses that you do not know to be useful or believe to be beautiful, he prompted a movement for design reform in Britain, Europe, and America. Championing Morris's views, the Society of Arts and Crafts in Boston led the quest for usefulness and beauty in the United States. As the oldest arts and crafts organization in the country, it exerted considerable influence. Among the Boston reformers were design critics whose profession became increasingly important in the nineteenth century. Many of them, including a number of prominent women, were also architects, designers, craft workers, educators, and theorists. Their views on design reform were substantive and often controversial. This richly illustrated book explores the interaction of craft workers and critics as they collaborated to improve the quality of the living and working environment in Boston and across the United States. Beverly K. Brandt examines multiple overlapping topics: the evolution of the profession of design criticism in the nineteenth century; Boston in the Gilded Age as a center for reform epitomized by the Aesthetic and the Arts and Crafts movements; the formative years of the Society of Arts and Crafts 1897-1917; key personalities associated with that organization; the theoretical underpinnings of the Arts and Crafts movement; and a diaspora of Boston reformers who left the city to promote usefulness and beauty across
