Responsible National Health Insurance:

Responsible National Health Insurance Mark V. Pauly, 1992 Universal health insurance can be achieved according to the four authors of this book by reshaping government regulation and tax policy on health insurance In their plan every American would be required to buy insurance and tax credits would be available These credits and the deductible on each policy would vary according to family income The cost of the tax credits would be financed by ending the present tax exemption for health insurance premiums paid by employers National Health Insurance United States.
