Matthew Hutson,2013-02-26 In this witty and perceptive debut a former editor at Psychology Today shows us how magical thinking makes life worth living Psychologists have documented a litany of cognitive biases misperceptions of the world and explained their positive functions Now Matthew Hutson shows us that even the most hardcore skeptic indulges in magical thinking all the time and it's crucial to our survival Drawing on evolution cognitive science and neuroscience Hutson shows us that magical thinking has been so useful to us that it's hardwired into our brains It encourages us to think that we actually have free will It helps make us believe that we have an underlying purpose in the world It can even protect us from the paralyzing awareness of our own mortality In other words magical thinking is a completely irrational way of making our lives make rational sense With wonderfully entertaining stories personal reflections and sharp observations Hutson reveals our deepest fears and longings He also assures us that it is no accident his surname contains so many of the same letters as this imprint

A Cognitive Theory of Magic Jesper Sørensen, 2007 Magic is a universal phenomenon Everywhere we look people perform ritual actions in which desirable qualities are transferred by means of physical contact and objects or persons are manipulated by things of their likeness In this book Sørensen embraces a cognitive perspective in order to investigate this long established but controversial topic Following a critique of the traditional approaches to magic and basing his claims on classical ethnographic cases the author explains magic's universality by examining a number of recurrent cognitive processes underlying its different manifestations He focuses on how power is infused into the ritual practice how representations of contagion and similarity can be used to connect otherwise distinct objects in order to manipulate one by the other and how the performance of ritual prompts representations of magical actions as effective Bringing these features together the author proposes a cognitive theory of how people can represent magical rituals as purposeful actions and how ritual actions are integrated into more complex representations of events This explanation in turn yields new insights into the constitutive role of magic in the formation of institutionalised religious ritual
