of domesticity early ideas about city planning and land economics and an evolving twentieth century discourse about the racial attributes of property values Looking at the persistent challenges of racial difference economic inequality and private property ownership that were present in urban design and planning from the start Lewinnek argues that white Americans attachment to property and community were not simply reactions to post 1945 Civil Rights Movement and federally enforced integration policies Rather Chicago s mostly immigrant working class bought homes seeking an elusive respectability and class mobility and trying to protect their property values against what they perceived as African American threats which eventually flared in violent racial conflict The Working Man s Reward examines the roots of America s suburbanization in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries showing how Chicagoans helped form America s urban sprawl The Journal of the Assembly During the ...
