Sex And Longevity Sexuality Gender Reproduction Parenthood:

Sex and Longevity: Sexuality, Gender, Reproduction, Parenthood J.-M. Robine, T.B.L. Kirkwood, M.

Allard, 2012-12-06 A central concept in the evolutionary theory of senescence is the idea that ageing results from life history trade offs. In particular, the disposable soma theory suggests that longevity is determined through the setting of longevity assurance mechanisms so as to provide an optimal compromise between investments in somatic maintenance including stress resistance and in reproduction. Comparative studies among mammalian species confirm that cells from long lived species appear to have a greater intrinsic capacity to withstand stresses than cells from short lived species. Childbearing at older ages has become increasingly common in modern societies because of demographic changes, medical progress and personal choice. While the detrimental effects of late reproduction on infant mortality and genetic diseases have been well documented, little is known about the possible postponed detrimental effects of late parenting.

Modulating Aging and Longevity S.I.

Rattan, 2003-09-30 After decades of systematic collection of data describing age related changes in organisms, organs, tissues, cells and macromolecules, biogerontologists are now in a position to construct general principles of ageing and explore various possibilities of intervention using rational approaches. While not giving serious consideration to the claims made by charlatans, it cannot be ignored that several researchers are making genuine attempts to test and develop various means of intervention for the prevention and treatment of age related diseases for regaining the functional abilities and for prolonging the lifespan of experimental organisms. This book provides the most up to date information and a critical evaluation of a variety of approaches being tried for modulating aging and longevity including dietary supplementation with antioxidants, vitamins and hormones, genetic engineering, life style alterations and hormesis through mild stress. The goal of research on ageing is not to increase human longevity regardless of the consequences but to increase active longevity free from disability and functional dependence.

Health Expectations for Older Women Sarah B. Laditka, 2014-06-11 Explore international trends in health and longevity with a special focus on older women. This essential book examines the latest research on life expectancy and active life expectancy, the number of years that women can expect to live free from major disability in developed and developing countries around the world. It also explores the policy implications of the contributors' findings. Here you will find a global study using data from the World Health Organization, a European study using data from OECD countries and studies of women in the United Kingdom, Fiji, The Netherlands, Japan, Canada and the United States. With contributions from demographers, economists, epidemiologists, gerontologists, medical statisticians, policy analysts, physicians, public health directors and sociologists, International Perspectives on Health Expectancies for Older Women compares mortality and morbidity trends in various populations. In addition to reviewing the current literature on active life expectancy, this informative book looks at the distribution of total unimpaired and impaired life for several groups of older women defined by race, education and marital history, gender differences in health profiles in The Netherlands, gender differences in life with and without six major diseases including both morbid and mortal conditions in the United States how mortality and morbidity patterns differ for Canadian women and men 45 years of age and older focusing on risk factors and chronic conditions such as low income low education abnormal body mass index lack of physical activity smoking cancer diabetes and arthritis patterns of healthy life expectancy for older women around the globe a comparison of the development and progression of physical disability in Japanese men and women and more

Brain and Longevity Caleb E. Finch, Jean-Marie Robine, 2013-12-21 In this third volume on longevity Fondation Ipsen has again collected the most recent results in research on genes and diet in the evolution of human longevity educational level and longevity cognitive impairment and survival at older age and other contributions The preponderance of relatively short compared to long lived organisms suggests that morphogenesis is easier to accomplish than is maintenance of soma whereas the broad range of longevity of organisms demonstrates that maintaining soma for extended periods of time is possible The underlying assumption of disposable soma theory of aging is that the expense of maintaining somatic cells depends on their contribution to the welfare of the germ cells early life conditions Concepts were organized into a life course approach for survival analysis The analysis of the data enabled to the estimation of mortality trajectories which in turn confirmed the exceptional longevity of the population understudy and in particular of males The investigation of differential survival among members of the same community brought to light the relevance of certain familial variables on survival which are not exclusively genetic The results achieved open the way to further studies
