Imperative Robert P Clark, 2018-02-12 Robert Clark delves into 100 millennia of human history to create a unified and consistent explanation for humankind's inner need to spread itself across the globe He examines key events from different eras such as the voyages of the Chinese treasure fleet the shaping of the Aztec's trade system in MesoAmerica the role of steam-powered transport in the supply of an English city the rise of the gas-powered engine and the digitization of information in the computer age melding them together to form a framework for understanding the process of globalization Drawing on a variety of academic disciplines including the physical sciences biology anthropology geography economics political science sociology and demography Clark reveals the spread of humans and their cultures to be part of an ongoing struggle to supply the energy needs of an increasingly large and complex society Entropy and thermodynamics terms often ignored or misunderstood by social science students clearly frame a fascinating vision of humans inherent tendency toward a globalized world Although human expansion has drawn increasing attention in the last several decades as this tumultuous century has progressed Clark shows that the process of globalization is not a recent concept From the very roots of the species humankind has been driven by a range of internal and external factors to expand in order to survive the increasing complexity of human civilization

A Short History of Economic Progress Y.S. Brenner, 2014-06-17 Y S Brenner is an economist whose main concern is with development and this attitude is reflected in his approach to economic history He begins this seminal study in the era of the Reformation in Europe and bases it on the hypothesis that once started economic progress will spread over ever increasing parts of the earth wherever and whenever conditions become suitable From this point of view he examines the nature of the impediments which prevent the more rapid and general progress of mankind towards greater material affluence while at the same time considering the positive growth promoting factors in the various economies Thus he provides an analysis of economic progress in the developed countries showing which natural social political and cultural forces promoted such progress and which delayed or hindered it He attempts to explain why European nations took several decades to emulate the achievements of Britain and why nations in other parts of the world such as Japan and Russia were unable for a considerable time to match the advances made in parts of Western Europe and the United States Finally he attempts to explain why the developing countries are still finding it so difficult to catch up with the economic progress of the more advanced nations Y S Brenner was Head of the Department of Economics at Cape Coast University in Ghana The book arose from a series of lectures on economic development he delivered there during the years 1966 1967 This book was first published in 1969 Science and Political Controversy David E.
