Abstract

This statement provides dentists and stakeholders with current best practices for pediatric pain management. Infants, children, adolescents, and individuals with special health care needs may experience pain resulting from dental/orofacial injury, infection, and dental procedures. Dental pain is an inflammatory condition that can be categorized as somatic (i.e., periodontal, alveolar, mucosal) or visceral (i.e., pulp). Dental professionals should consider pain assessment for all patients. Inadequate pain management may lead to significant physical and psychological consequences for patients. Perioperative pain management approaches include pre-emptive pain management (e.g., anesthetics), use of local anesthesia during general anesthesia for post-operative pain control, non-pharmacological analgesic interventions (e.g., providing a calm environment, emotional support), distraction and imagery (e.g., counting, video games), and pharmacological pain control agents including non-opioid analgesics (e.g., nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs, acetaminophen) and opioid analgesics. Acetaminophen and nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory medications are first-line pharmacologic therapies for pain management. Use of opioids for pediatric dental patients should be rare, and steps to mitigate opioid misuse are discussed.

This document was developed through a collaborative effort of the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry Councils on Clinical Affairs and Scientific Affairs to offer updated information and guidance on pain management in infants, children, adolescents, and individuals with special health care needs.

KEYWORDS: FACIAL PAIN, TOOTHACHE, PAIN MANAGEMENT, ACUTE PAIN, CHRONIC PAIN, PAIN, POSTOPERATIVE

Purpose

The American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry (AAPD) recognizes that infants, children, adolescents, and individuals with special health care needs can and do experience pain due to dental/orofacial injury, infection, and dental procedures, and that inadequate pain management may have significant physical and psychological consequences for the patient. Appreciation of pediatric pain can help practitioners develop clinical approaches to prevent or substantially relieve dental pain. When pharmacological intervention is necessary to manage pain, the practitioner must understand the consequences, morbidities, and toxicities associated with the use of specific therapeutic agents. These recommendations are intended to provide dental professionals and other stakeholders with current best practices for pain management in pediatric dentistry.

Methods

This document was developed by the Council on Clinical Affairs and is based on a review of current dental and medical literature pertaining to pain management in pediatric dental patients. Review of existing federal and professional pain management guidelines and consensus statements were used to assist with this document. An electronic search was conducted in the PubMed®/MEDLINE database using the terms: dental pain management, pediatric pain assessment, preemptive analgesia, pediatric and acetaminophen, adolescent and acetaminophen, pediatric and nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs), adolescent and NSAIDs, pediatric and opioids, adolescent and opioids, opioid risk, adolescent orofacial pain, pediatric and adolescent chronic pain, non-pharmacologic pain management; fields all; limits within the last 10 years, humans, English, and clinical trials. There were 1395 articles met these criteria. Papers for review were chosen from this list and from references within selected articles. When data did not appear sufficient or were inconclusive, recommendations were based upon expert and/or consensus opinion by experienced researchers and clinicians.

Background

Pain is defined by the International Association of the Study of Pain as "an unpleasant sensory and emotional experience associated with actual or potential tissue damage or described in terms of such damage."¹ Pain management includes
