Mombasa An African City:

Mombasa, an African City Harm J. De Blij, 1978 The African City Bill Freund, 2007-03-05 This book is comprehensive both in terms of time coverage from before the Pharaohs to the present moment and in that it tries to consider cities from the entire continent not just Sub Saharan Africa Apart from factual information and rich description material culled from many sources it looks at many issues from why urban life emerged in the first place to how present day African cities cope in difficult times Instead of seeing towns and cities as somehow extraneous to the real Africa it views them as an inherent part of developing Africa indigenous colonial and post colonial and emphasizes the extent to which the future of African society and African culture will likely be played out mostly in cities The book is written to appeal to students of history but equally to geographers planners sociologists and development specialists interested in urban problems

Mombasa. An African City. Harm J. de Blij. [Illustr.] Harm Jan de Bly, 1968 Urbanization, Urbanism, and Urbanity in an African City P. Jenkins, 2013-12-17 Urbanization in sub Saharan Africa has historic roots and though it has accelerated in recent decades it retains distinctive forms This book explores sub Saharan urbanism through a detailed and wide ranging study of Maputo Mozambique covering physical and socio economic factors as well as an ethnographic inquiry into cultural attitudes

Representing the City Anthony D. King, 1996-02 Classic representations of the city have focused on simplistic urban dichotomies such as renewal or decline poverty or prosperity and vice or vigor We are left with the question of what actually constitutes a city and what makes it and its people succeed or fail Recent writing on the city however has begun to question the images metaphors and discourses through which the contemporary city is represented Discussing recent visual architectural and spatial transformations in New York and other major world cities in relation to the themes of ethnicity capital and culture Re Presenting the City moves between interpretive representations of the newly emerging metropolis and the theoretical and methodological questions raised by the task of such representations Contributors with backgrounds in urban planning sociology cultural studies architecture art history geography and philosophy reflect on the construction of both the real and the unreal city the images metaphors and discourses through which the contemporary city is represented and the texts which both mediate our experience of as well as contribute to producing the city of the future Making an African City Jennifer Hart, 2024-03-05 In Making an African City Jennifer Hart traces the way that British colonial officials Accra Town Council members and a diverse group of technocrats used regulation to define what an acceptable city looked like Unlike cities elsewhere on the continent Accra had a long history of urbanism that predated British colonial presence By criminalizing some activities and privileging others colonial officials sought to marginalize indigenous practices of Accra residents and shape the development of a new modern city Hart argues however that residents regularly pushed back protesting regulations refusing to participate in newly developed systems reappropriating infrastructure demanding rights to city services and asserting their own informal vision for the future of the city While urban plans and regulations ultimately failed to substantively remake the city their effects were and are still felt by urban residents who are often subject to but not served by urban infrastructure Making an African City explores how the informalization of Accra's development was a historical process not a natural and self evident phenomenon which connects the history of the city with the history of urban development and the growth of technocracy around the world

Neighbours and Nationals in an African City Ward David Parkin, 2024-03-29 This study analyses the way in which tribal ties are maintained in the development of a tribally mixed middle class community in Kampala Uganda Political independence in the early nineteen sixties in much of Africa created expectations of increased development education and living standards There was hope that ethnic tensions arising from false colonial boundaries might be transcended by newly emerging socio economic status groups However the new national boundaries suddenly made aliens of peoples who had migrated and settled in towns distant from their home countries The interplay of nationality ethnicity and socio economic status or class was given a new theatre Hope was dramatically tempered by nationalist and ethnic conflicts which cut across ethnically mixed small status groups of neighbours and friends In Kampala Uganda this rapidly unfolding drama resulted in the expulsion of two Kenyan ethnic groups and polarised peoples from northern and southern Uganda The essentialisation of ethnic and national identity imposed by colonialism was thus taken on in this new situation by the people themselves with the result that they became cultural starting points of social and political judgement This title is part of UC Press's Voices Revived program which commemorates University of California Press's mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 Voices Revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology This title was originally published in 1969 This study analyses the way in which tribal ties are maintained in the development of a tribally mixed middle class community in Kampala Uganda Political independence in the early nineteen sixties in much of Africa created expectations of increased dev

The Management of Urban Development in Zambia Emmanuel Mutale, 2017-11-30 Over the past few decades the developing world has seen unprecedented urban growth and urban areas have had to deal with a number of complex problems as a result While population growth is one of the factors contributing to the deprivation and decay characteristic of most urban areas in the developing world there are other factors Apart from demographic and economic factors the political organization factor of centralization has concentrated decision making and with it resources in the urban areas leading to further rural urban migration Another factor is one of colonialism The transfer of foreign social structures and technology while offering alternatives has dislocated and significantly altered indigenous patterns of development in the developing world This book examines a region where this last factor is a major significance Zambia's copperbelt Here the concentration of towns which were developed very rapidly in the 1930s made Zambia one of the most highly urbanized Sub Saharan countries By focusing on copperbelt towns the book provides a critical analysis of the development of urban policy in Zambia Aspects of conflict and cooperation between different interest groups and where relevant their economic relationships are explored and a structural conflict model of urban management is proposed The book concludes that with proper management existing and emerging sectional interests in urban areas can help provide conditions which foster the formulation of equitable urban policy Although focused on Zambia the proposed structural conflict approach has potential for wider application
