Perpetual Motion Michel Jeanneret, 2001-01-16 The popular conception of the Renaissance as a culture devoted to order and perfection does not account for an important characteristic of Renaissance art many of the period's major works including those by da Vinci Erasmus Michelangelo Ronsard and Montaigne appeared as works in progress always liable to changes and additions In Perpetual Motion Michel Jeanneret argues for a sixteenth century swept up in change and fascinated by genesis and metamorphosis Jeanneret begins by tracing the metamorphic sensibility in sixteenth century science and culture Theories of creation and cosmology of biology and geology profoundly affected the perspectives of leading thinkers and artists on the nature of matter and form The conception of humanity as understood by Pico de Mirandola Erasmus Rabelais and others reflections upon history the theory and practice of language all led to new ideas new genres and a new interest in the diversity of experience Jeanneret goes on to show that the invention of the printing press did not necessarily produce more stable literary texts than those transmitted orally or as hand printed manuscripts authors incorporated ideas of transformation into the process of composing and revising and encouraged creative interpretations from their readers translators and imitators Extending the argument to the visual arts Jeanneret considers da Vinci's sketches and paintings changing depictions of the world map the mythological sculptures in the gardens of Prince Orsini in Bomarzo and many other Renaissance works More than fifty illustrations supplement his analysis
