

Ski School Tips For Kids

If you want your kids to be able to just make basic turns down the beginner hill and know how to ride the chairlift, you'll probably be fine with 2-3 lessons. This is a great way to start off learning to ski and will help you know the basics to get out and ski on your own.

A good rule of thumb is that at the beginning of a ski trip, you should sign all of the kids up for ski school (or dedicate days to teach them yourself).

The best option is if you can get your kids into a ski school program with the same instructor the whole time or do all their lessons back to back.

If you are just going skiing for a week or 2, plan on a minimum of 1 lesson (for more advanced skiers), up to about 4.
