Abstract: The basidiomycete genus Galerina Earle accommodates more than 300 small brown-spored agarics worldwide, predominantly described from the Northern hemisphere. The delimitation of species and infrageneric units hitherto has been based on morphological and, to some extent, ecological characters. In this study we have analyzed nuclear ribosomal LSU and ITS sequences to reveal infrageneric phylogeny and the phylogenetic placement of Galerina among the dark-spored agarics. Sequences from 36 northern hemisphere Galerina species and 19 other dark-spored taxa were analyzed, some of them obtained from EMBL/GenBank. Our results, received from Bayesian and distance methods, strongly suggest that Galerina is a polyphyletic genus. The LSU analysis shows that Galerina is composed of three or four separate monophyletic main groups. In addition, a few species cluster together with other dark-spored agarics. The same groups are recognized in the ITS tree and they correspond roughly to previously recognized subgenera or sections in Galerina. With high support our LSU analysis suggests that Gymnopilus is a monophyletic genus and that Gymnopilus and one of the Galerina lineages ("mycenopsis") are sister groups. The analyses further indicate that the Galerina lineages, as well as the genus Gymnopilus, could be referred to a strongly emended family Strophariaceae, which corresponds largely to the family as circumscribed by Kühner (1980). Our results affirm that morphological characters often are highly homoplastic in the agarics. At the present stage formal taxonomic consequences or nomenclatural changes are not proposed.

Key words: Basidiomycota, Agaricales, brown-

INTRODUCTION

The genus Galerina (Basidiomycota, Agaricales) has more than 300 species (Horak 1994), predominantly described from the Northern hemisphere. Most species have basidiocarps associated with living bryophytes, probably as saprophytes on dead parts, whereas others are confined to woody material or other plant debris. The delimitation of species and infrageneric units hitherto has been based on morphological and, to some extent, ecological characters. The basidiocarps of Galerina are small and mycenoid, although sometimes they are slightly fleshier and occasionally the stipe is provided with a membranous annulus. Important gross-morphological characters separating the species include ecology, fruit body size, veil conditions, surface features of the pileus, insertment of the lamellae, color and lepto-organic characters (flavor and odor). In the majority of the species, the spores are ornamented and have a "plage" (a delimited smooth area on the adaxial side above the apiculus), but in some species they are ornamented also over the plage area or smooth. The spores in species provided with a plage are exceptional by having an inner wall layer, endospore, which inflates after successive exposure to diluted base and acid solutions, and furthermore this endospore is strongly dextrinoid and cyanophilic (the "ammonia-co-acetic treatment," Kühner 1972, 1980). A rich assortment of cystidia of different shapes and locations constitutes, in combination with spore characters, a fundament for recognition of the various Galerina species. In most cases microscopic examination is needed for species recognition and high quality optics often are required, and even then identifications may remain doubtful.

Current circumscription of the genus Galerina largely follows that of Kühner (1935), who excluded groups now placed in Coscybe s. lat. and included G. marginata and related annulate species that previously were referred to Pholiot (TABLE 1). This circumscription of Galerina, followed by a later segregation of the G. stegani group, has been generally accepted. However, Watling and Gregory (1993) in-
