Psychotraumatology George S. Everly Jr., Jeffrey M. Lating, 2013-11-21 The nosological roots of post traumatic stress disorder PTSD may be traced back to the American Psychiatric Association's DSM I entry of gross stress reaction as published in 1952 Yet the origins of the current enthusiasm with regard to post traumatic stress can be traced back to 1980 which marked the emergence of the term post traumatic stress disorder in the DSM III This reflected the American Psychiatric Association's acknowledgment of post traumatic stress as a discrete phenomenologically unique and reliable psychopathological entity at a time in American history when such recognition had important social political and psychiatric implications Clearly prior to DSM I the lack of a generally accepted terminology did little to augment the disabling effects that psychological traumatization could engender Nor did the subsequent provision of an official diagnostic label alone render substantial ameliorative qualities Nevertheless the post Vietnam DSM III recognition of PTSD did herald a dramatic increase in research and clinical discovery The American Red Cross acknowledged the need to establish disaster mental health services the American Psychological Association urged its members to form disaster mental health networks and the Veterans Administration established a national study center for PTSD

Building the Resilient Community M. Jan Holton, 2011-01-01 How do some communities around the world that suffer outrageous violence and trauma manage with few outside resources not only to survive but to thrive September 11 the devastation of hurricane Katrina school shootings and other events of community violence and trauma have taught us as a nation and a church about the fundamental importance of building a caring community that fosters resilience and hope Building the Resilient Community takes a refreshing turn of perspective by giving priority not only to the formally educated voices of the West but to those among the most marginalized and invisible in the world refugees Based on ethnographic research in Kakuma Refugee Camp and remote villages of southern Sudan Holton presents a communal case study of a group of devoutly Christian refugees known as the Lost Boys of Sudan and asks the question Might they have something to teach us about being a resilient community As Holton investigates their deeply embedded cultural and religious beliefs that nurture a profound sense of responsibility toward others we find a communal relationship that reflects a unique sense of care and obligation This deep frame for communal care breaks through as the root of a remarkable faith narrative that serves to help mitigate symptoms of trauma and to undergird resilience and may do the same for us The Haunted Self Onno van der Hart, Ellert R. S. Nijenhuis, Kathy Steele, 2014-09-02 Life is an ongoing struggle for patients who have been chronically traumatized. They typically have a wide array of symptoms often classified under different combinations of comorbidity which can make assessment and treatment complicated and confusing for the therapist. Many patients have substantial problems with daily living and relationships including serious intrapsychic conflicts and maladaptive coping strategies. Their suffering essentially relates to a terrifying and painful past that haunts them. Even when survivors attempt to hide their distress beneath a facade of normality, a common strategy therapists often feel besieged by their many symptoms and serious pain. Small wonder that many survivors of chronic traumatization have seen several therapists with little if any gains and that quite a few have been labeled as untreatable or resistant. In this book, three leading researchers and clinicians share what they have learned from treating and studying chronically traumatized individuals across more than 65 years of collective experience. Based on the theory of structural dissociation of the personality in combination with a Janetian psychology of action, the authors have developed a model of phase-oriented treatment that focuses on the identification and treatment of structural dissociation and related maladaptive mental and behavioral actions. The foundation of this approach is to support patients in learning more effective mental and behavioral actions that will enable them to become more adaptive in life and to resolve their structural dissociation. This principle implies an overall therapeutic goal of raising the integrative capacity in order to cope with the demands of daily life and deal with the haunting remnants of the past with the unfinished business of traumatic memories. Of interest to clinicians, students of clinical psychology and psychiatry as well as to researchers, all those interested in adult survivors of chronic child abuse and neglect will find helpful insights and tools that may make the treatment more effective and efficient and more tolerable for the suffering patient.
