Old Issues And New Strategies In Arms Control And Verification:

Old Issues and New Strategies in Arms Control and Verification James Brown, 1995 This volume is based on papers commissioned for and presented at the Fifth Annual International Arms Control and Verification Conference held by the John G Tower Center for Political Studies of Southern Methodist University Dallas Texas Verification United States. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, 1976 The Verification Challenge SCRIBNER, RALSTON, METZ, 2013-12-11 The Verification Challenge by Richard A. Scribner, Theodore J. Ralston, William D. Metz, 1985 Arms Control Verification and the New Role of On-site Inspection Lewis A. Dunn, Amy E. Gordon, 1990 Since enactment of the INF Treaty on site inspection to monitor compliance has come to figure prominently in negotiations over strategic arms reductions conventional force reductions and specific weapons bans This volume offers many perspectives on the future of on site inspection in arms control Experts in the field offer their evaluations of what on site inspection can and cannot contribute to the realization of US arms control and national security goals in the coming decade Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR

, 2012 Nuclear weapon arms control treaty verification is a key aspect of any agreement between signatories to establish that the terms and conditions spelled out in the treaty are being met Historically arms control negotiations have focused more on the rules and protocols for reducing the numbers of warheads and delivery systems sometimes resorting to complex and arcane procedures for counting forces in an attempt to address perceived or real imbalances in a nation's strategic posture that could lead to instability Verification procedures are generally defined in arms control treaties and supporting documents and tend to focus on technical means and measures designed to ensure that a country is following the terms of the treaty and that it is not liable to engage in deception or outright cheating in an attempt to circumvent the spirit and the letter of the agreement As the Obama Administration implements the articles terms and conditions of the recently ratified and entered into force New START treaty there are already efforts within and outside of government to move well below the specified New START levels of 1550 warheads 700 deployed strategic delivery vehicles and 800 deployed and nondeployed strategic launchers Inter Continental Ballistic Missile ICBM silos Submarine Launched Ballistic Missile SLBM tubes on submarines and bombers A number of articles and opinion pieces have appeared that advocate for significantly deeper cuts in the U S

nuclear stockpile with some suggesting that unilateral reductions on the part of the U S would help coax Russia and others to follow our lead Papers and studies prepared for the U S Department of Defense and at the U S Air War College have also been published suggesting that nuclear forces totaling no more than about 300 warheads would be sufficient to meet U S national security and deterrence needs Davis 2011 Schaub and Forsyth 2010 Recent articles by James M Acton and others suggest that the prospects for maintaining U S security and minimizing the chances of nuclear war while deliberately reducing stockpiles to a few hundred weapons is possible but not without risk While the question of the appropriate level of cuts to U S nuclear forces is being actively debated a key issue continues to be whether verification procedures are strong enough to ensure that both the U S and Russia are fulfilling their obligations under the current New Start treaty and any future arms reduction treaties A recent opinion piece by Henry Kissinger and Brent Scowcroft 2012 raised a number of issues with respect to governing a policy to enhance strategic stability including in deciding on force levels and lower numbers verification is crucial Particularly important is a determination of what level of uncertainty threatens the calculation of stability At present that level is well within the capabilities of the existing verification systems We must be certain that projected levels maintain and when possible reinforce that confidence The strengths and weaknesses of the New START verification regime should inform and give rise to stronger regimes for future arms control agreements These future arms control agreements will likely need to include other nuclear weapons states and so any verification regime will need to be acceptable to all parties Currently China is considered the most challenging party to include in any future arms control agreement and China s willingness to enter into verification regimes such as those implemented in New START may only be possible when it feels it has reached nuclear parity with the U S and Russia Similarly in keeping with its goals of reaching peer status with the U S and Russia Frieman 2004 suggests that China would be more willing to accept internationally accepted and applied verification regimes rather than bilateral ones The current verification protocols specified in the New START treaty are considered as the baseline case and are contrasted with possible alternative verification protocols that could be effective in a post New START era of significant reductions in U S and other countries nuclear stockpiles Of particular concern is the possibility of deception and breakout when declared and observed numbers of weapons are below the level considered to pose an existential threat to the U S In a regime of very low stockpile numbers traditional verification protocols as currently embodied in the New START treaty might prove less than adequate I introduce and discuss a number of issues that need to be considered in future verification protocols many of which do not have immediate solutions and so require further study I also discuss alternatives and enhancements to traditional verification protocols for example confidence building measures such as burden sharing against the common threat of weapon of mass destruction WMD terrorism joint research and development

Challenges Of Verification Heinz Gaertner, 2019-05-20 Heinz Gaertner argues in this Occasional Paper one area of arms control in which the NNA and smaller European states can make a significant contribution is verification This study explores the possibilities for the smaller nations of Europe to make positive contributions to the verification of reductions in conventional forces and arms a chemical Functional Bureau Strategy United States. Department of State. Bureau of Arms Control, Verification, and Compliance, 2018 The Future of Arms Control Michael A. Levi, Michael E. O'Hanlon, 2004-12-07 Arms control for decades at the core of the foreign policy consensus today is among the more contentious issues in American politics It is pilloried and considered out of mode in many conservative quarters while being viewed as nearly sacrosanct in many liberal circles In this new book Michael Levi and Michael O Hanlon argue that neither the left nor the right has a correct view of the proper utility of arms control in the age of terror Arms control in the traditional sense lengthy treaties to limit nuclear and other military competitions among the great powers is no longer particularly useful Nor should arms control be pursued as a means to the end of constraining the power of nations or of promoting global government It is still a critical tool though for controlling dangerous technologies particularly those that in the hands of hostile states or terrorist organizations could cause massive death and destruction Arms control and coercive action including military force must be integrated into an overall strategy for preventing proliferation now more than ever before Arms control should be used to gain earlier warning of illicit activities inside dangerous states allowing the international community to take coercive action in a timely way The authors propose three new criteria to guide future arms control efforts designed to respond to today's geopolitical realities Arms control must focus on the dangers of catastrophic technology not so much in the hands of major powers as of small states and terrorist groups Their criteria lead to a natural focus on nuclear and biological technologies Much tougher measures to prevent countries from gaining nuclear weapons technology while purportedly complying with the Nuclear Non Proliferation Treaty and procedures for controlling dangerous biological technologies will be most prominent in this framework while lower priority is given to efforts such as bilateral nuclear accords and most t Integrated Arms Control in an Era of Strategic Competition Rebecca K.C. Hersman, Heather Williams, Suzanne Claeys, 2022-05-12 Can contemporary arms control keep pace with the rapid rate of change in both geopolitics and technology While the challenges to future arms control point to a rocky road ahead measures that build confidence reduce miscalculation enhance transparency restrain costly and dangerous military competition and offer useful mechanisms and venues for addressing sources of conflict will be of increasing value For arms control tools to succeed however they must be adapted to the current security environment account for rapidly evolving technological and informational factors and consider alternative structures modalities and participation models Indeed now is the time for a recoupling of arms control with deterrence in a way that recognizes these new realities Now is the time for integrated arms control that enhances stability embraces plurality and reinforces resiliency This CSIS study examines the implication and prospects for the future of arms control in a highly competitive security environment in which challenges from advanced technologies and diminished state control over processes of verification become increasingly prominent features even as the scope and modalities of arms control grow more complex and multifaceted The report offers a reexamination of the broad contours of arms control and its role in managing competitive security risks and challenges and the implications for U S policymakers academics and strategic thinkers engaged in U S nuclear policy

New Horizons and New Strategies in Arms Control, 1998 Arms Control Verification William F. Rowell, 1986 Control But Verify York Centre for International and Strategic Studies, 1994 Disarmament Sketches Thomas Graham, 2002 Thomas Graham Jr played a role in the negotiation of every major international arms control and non proliferation agreement signed by the United States during the past thirty years As a U S government lawyer and diplomat he helped to shape negotiate and secure U S ratification of such cornerstones of international security as SALT START and the ABM INF and CFE treaties as well as conventions prohibiting biological and chemical weapons Graham s memoir offers a history of the key negotiations which have substantially reduced the threat of nuclear war His is a personal account of bureaucratic battles over arms control in six administrations navigating among the White House Congress cabinet secretaries and agencies with overlapping responsibilities and often competing interests No comparable text brings together detailed analyses of so many pivotal documents in the history of the Cold War it offers abundant primary source material for historians international lawyers and arms control specialists around the world Disarmament Sketches also charts the rise and fall of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency the only U S government agency with primary responsibility for arms control policy and lays out an agenda for continuing progress in reducing weapons stockpiles around the globe Throughout his career Graham has worked tirelessly to reverse the nuclear arms race and to persuade leaders around the world to make their nations safer by renouncing and reducing their weapons of mass destruction

Verification in an Age of Insecurity Philip D. O'Neill (Jr.), 2010 Verification in an Age of Insecurity takes the reader into some of the most urgent arms control issues facing the world community including the nuclear activities of rogue states and threats from sophisticated non state actors In the book national security expert Philip D O'Neill Jr identifies and addresses issues from the resuscitated disarmament agenda from the comprehensive test ban to fissile material and biological weapons O'Neill examines the need for shifts in verification standards and policy suitable for our volatile era and beyond it He surveys recent history to show how established verification procedures fail to produce the certainty necessary to meet today s threats Verification in an Age of Insecurity goes beyond a discussion of rogue states like North Korea to offer suggestions on how best to bring compliance policy up to date with modern threats

Verification John Goodwin Tower, James Brown, William K. Cheek, 1992 Key to any arms control agreement are its provisions for verification and compliance Verification questions will retain their fundamental importance as the U S debates arms control proposals in Geneva and Vienna in the halls of Congress in the news media in symposia and perhaps in the electoral process What limitations on conventional and nuclear weapons are we safe in accepting and at what levels U S verification capabilities are an essential part of this debate A collection of insightful essays by the leading experts on verification issues Verification The Key to Arms Control in the 1990s makes a valuable contribution to the rational and responsible discussion of arms control BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc All Rights Reserved
