Solidarity Between Parents and Their Adult Children in Europe Tineke Fokkema, Susan ter Bekke, Pearl A. Dykstra, 2008
At present our knowledge of the current state of solidarity between parents and their adult children in Europe is limited. Insight into contemporary intergenerational solidarity is not only important for the well being of individuals but is also of great interest to policy makers. Patterns of intergenerational solidarity are not only affected by social policies and services but also reveal a number of important social policy issues and dilemmas. Will encouraging labour force participation among women and older workers mean they have less time to care for their dependents? Should formal care services be further expanded to relieve the burden faced by family members with the risk that they start to replace informal care? This report aims to contribute to this insight by providing a more differentiated picture of the strength, nature and direction of solidarity between parents and their adult children, its variation among European countries and its determinants. Our findings indicate that parent-child ties are quite strong. The majority of Europeans aged 50 and over live in close proximity and are in frequent contact with at least one of the children. Moreover, strong family care obligations still exist and a substantial amount of support is being exchanged between parents and their non-co-resident children. Interesting differences, however, emerge between individuals and countries. While fathers are more inclined to assist their children financially, mothers have more frequent contact and exchange more help in kind with their children. Being religious and having a large family have a positive impact on several dimensions of intergenerational solidarity. Parental divorce and a better socioeconomic position of parents and children, on the other hand, lead to a weakening of parent-child ties in many respects. Contrary to common belief, employed children show solidarity with their parents as much as those without a paid job. Differences in the nature of intergenerational solidarity between the European countries tend to follow the general division into an individualistic north and a familistic south.

Permission to Parent Robin Berman, MD, 2014-04-29 After being bombarded by parenting fad after parenting fad, moms and dads finally have a friendly commonsense guide to raising thriving children. Today many parents have rejected the dictatorships they resented from their own childhoods. But they overcorrected by turning into child pleasers. Showering praise and letting kids rule the roost has actually eroded the very self-esteem parents are trying to create. Using her clinical experience, psychiatrist Robin Berman shows parents how they can take charge while building a loving family with deep connections. How children learn love and respect at home becomes the template for how they show love and respect in life. It's a huge task, but Dr Berman is your ally every step of the way. Every parent's struggles are reflected, many of them comically, but so are heartwarming triumphs. Parents, teachers, and children themselves recount turning points at which they figured out what great parenting looked like and the magic it unlocked. This engaging book, a perfect mix of medical research and inspirational anecdotes, just might be the key to being the parent you want to be and the parent your children need.
