Children, Schools, And Inequality Doris R Entwisle, 2018-03-05 Educational sociologists have paid relatively little attention to children in middle childhood ages 6 to 12 whereas developmental psychologists have emphasized factors internal to the child much more than the social contexts in explaining children s development Children Schools and Inequality redresses that imbalance It examines elementary school outcomes e g test scores grades retention rates in light of the socioeconomic variation in schools and neighborhoods the organizational patterns across elementary schools and the ways in which family structure intersects with children s school performance Adding data from the Baltimore Beginning School Study to information culled from the fields of sociology child development and education this book suggests why the gap between the school achievement of poor children and those who are better off has been so difficult to close Doris Entwistle Karl Alexander and Linda Olson show why the first grade transition how children negotiate entry into full time schooling is a crucial period They also show that events over that time have repercussions that echo throughout children s entire school careers Currently the only study of this life transition to cover a comprehensive sample and to suggest straightforward remedies for urban schools Children Schools and Inequality can inform educators practitioners and policymakers as well as researchers in the sociology of education and child development

Developing Caring Relationships Among Parents, Children, Schools, and Communities Dana McDermott, 2008

This book focuses on parents and teachers as adult learners who should be growing and learning along with the children in their care. It lays out a theory of what parents and teachers need to care for children and themselves and then it shows how the author has assisted parents and teachers to put these theories into practice. McDermott relies on stories and listening to the voices of parents, teachers, and children to make her case. She weaves together the latest theories and research with these stories. She uses narratives of actual school meetings, workshops, parent planning and discussion groups, testimonies, newsletters, and research of others in the field to demonstrate applications of theory and research. She fills a gap by focusing on parents from all socioeconomic backgrounds.

The Parent-Centered Early School Michael R. Williams, 2021-12-12 First Published in 1997 This case study of a small independent parent-run program in Milwaukee's inner city finds that several factors combine to make the school effective: parental involvement at all levels including governance, a clear and shared sense of mission, and a coherent Montessori curriculum that takes children from preschool through the third grade. The study employed data from several surveys of parents, teachers' interviews with participants, and observation over five years. Begun twenty-seven years ago by parents and community members alienated from dysfunctional public schools and still supported mostly by contributions, Highland today is one of only a dozen schools in the United States receiving some of its revenue under a voucher program that provides state funds to independent schools. After an overview of Highland's history, demographics, and measures of success, two chapters examine the school's commitment to diversity, nonviolence, child nurturance, and egalitarianism. Other chapters focus on how Highland involves its parents and how parents alone govern the school, analyze the role of Highland's trustees, and details the school's Montessori curriculum. The final chapter explores the possibility of applying some of Highland's lessons to public school curriculums.

Parents, Schools and the State Helen Proctor, Anna Roch, Georg Breidenstein, Martin Forsey, 2023-11-14 This book maps globally shifting relations between families, schools, and the state across a range of nations: Australia, Germany, India, Norway, Singapore, Sweden, USA in the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries. Featuring contributions from leading international experts, the book's eight chapters reflect upon the apparently vital responsibility of parents for choosing the right sort of educational pathways for their children, offering comparative insights into several different kinds of state with different contexts for the practices of educational parenting. The contributors consider the proposition that a significant focus of the material, emotional, and occupational investment of contemporary parents is the formal education of their children, re-shaping not only the relationship between parents and schools but also the nature of parenthood itself. Parents are analysed both as local actors in schools and as subjects of national and international policy regimes, particularly recent and contemporary imperatives of marketisation. With a focus on social change the chapters examine the operation of global educational programmes and ideas in national and local settings The collected national and local studies attend to different confluences of local regional and transnational considering a variety of social and cultural patterns as well as national and local educational structures and policy regimes Parents Schools and The State Global Perspectives will be a useful resource for academics researchers and advanced students of comparative education educational policy and leadership educational research history of education sociology research methods and politics This book was originally published as a special issue of Comparative Education Efforts by Public K-8 Schools to Involve Parents in Children's Education Xianglei Chen,2001
