Systemic Functional Grammar & Natural Language Generation Elke Teich, 1999-04-01 This volume deals with the computational application of systemic functional grammar SFG for natural language generation In particular it describes the implementation of a fragment of the grammar of German in the computational framework of KOMET PENMAN for multilingual generation The text also presents a specification of explicit well formedness constraints on syntagmatic structure which are defined in the form of typed feature structures It thus achieves a model of systemic functional grammar that unites both the strengths of systemics such as stratification functional diversification and the orientation to context and the kind of syntactic generalizations that are typically found in modern syntagmatically focused computational grammars Translation and Cognition Gregory M. Shreve, Erik Angelone, 2010-05-28 Translation and Cognition assesses the state of the art in cognitive translation and interpreting studies by examining three important trends: methodological innovation, the evolution of research design, and the continuing integration of translation process research results with the core findings of the cognitive sciences. Several of the volume's essays focus on fruitful new process research methods such as eye tracking and keystroke logging that have arisen to supplement the use of think aloud protocols. Another set of contributions investigates how some central theories, concepts, and methods from our sister disciplines of psycholinguistics, cognitive psychology, and neuroscience can inform our understanding of translation processes and their development in novices and experts. Yet another set of essays argues that methodological innovation and integration with the cognitive sciences can lead to more robust research designs and theoretical frameworks to explain the intricacies of cognitive processing during translation and interpreting. Thus, this timely volume actively demonstrates that a new theoretical and methodological consensus in cognitive translation studies is emerging, promising to greatly improve the quality, verifiability, and generalizability of translation process research.

Voice-over Translation Eliana Franco, Anna Matamala, Pilar Orero, 2010 This book presents the first study of voice over from a wide approach including not only academic issues but also a description of the practice of voice over around the globe. The authors define the concept of voice over in Film Studies and Translation Studies and clarify the relationship between voice over and other audiovisual transfer modes. They also describe the translation process in voice over both for production and postproduction for fiction and non-fiction. The book also features course models on voice over which can be used as a source of inspiration by trainers willing to include this transfer mode in their courses. A global survey on voice over in which both practitioners and academics express their opinions and a commented bibliography on voice over complete this study. Each chapter includes exercises which both lecturers and students can find useful.

Comparable Corpora and Computer-assisted Translation Estelle Maryline Delpech, 2014-07-22 Computer-assisted translation (CAT) has always used translation memories which require the translator to have a corpus of previous translations that the CAT software can use to generate bilingual lexicons. This can be problematic when the translator does not have such a corpus, for instance when the text belongs to an emerging field. To solve this issue, CAT research has looked into the leveraging of comparable corpora, i.e. a set of texts in two or more languages which deal with the same topic but are not translations of one another. This work had two primary objectives. The first is to assess the input of lexicons extracted from comparable corpora in the context of a specialized human translation task. The second objective is to identify bilingual lexicon extraction methods which best match the translators' needs, determining the current limits of these techniques and suggesting improvements. The author focuses in particular on the identification of fertile translations, the management of multiple morphological structures, and the ranking of candidate translations. The experiments are carried out on two language pairs: English-French and English-German, and on specialized texts dealing with breast cancer This research puts significant emphasis on applicability methodological choices are guided by the needs of the final users This book is organized in two parts the first part presents the applicative and scientific context of the research and the second part is given over to efforts to improve compositional translation The research work presented in this book received the PhD Thesis award 2014 from the French association for natural language processing ATALA Text Mining of Web-Based Medical Content Amy Neustein, 2014-10-09 Includes Text Mining and Natural Language Processing Methods for extracting information from electronic health records and biomedical literature Analyzes text analytic tools for new media such as online forums social media posts tweets and video sharing Demonstrates how to use speech and audio technologies for improving access to online content for the visually impaired Text Mining of Web Based Medical Content examines various approaches to deriving high quality information from online biomedical literature electronic health records query search terms social media posts and tweets Using some of the latest empirical methods of knowledge extraction the authors show how online content generated by both professionals and laypersons can be mined for valuable information about disease processes adverse drug reactions not captured during clinical trials and tropical fever outbreaks Additionally the authors show how to perform information extraction on a hospital intranet how to build a social media search engine to glean information about patients own experiences interacting with healthcare professionals and how to improve access to online health information This volume provides a wealth of timely material for health informatic professionals and machine learning data mining and natural language researchers Topics in this book include Mining Biomedical Literature and Clinical Narratives Medication Information Extraction Machine Learning Techniques for Mining Medical Search Queries Detecting the Level of Personal Health Information Revealed in Social Media Curating Layperson s Personal Experiences with Health Care from Social Media and Twitter Health Dialogue Systems for Improving Access to Online Content Crowd based Audio Clips to Improve Online Video Access for the Visually Impaired Semantic based Visual Information Retrieval for Mining Radiographic Image Data Evaluating the Importance of Medical Terminology in YouTube Video Titles and Descriptions
