Valuing Environmental Preferences Ian Bateman,Kenneth George Willis,2001 Just as individuals have preferences regarding the various goods and services they purchase every day so they also hold preferences regarding public goods such as those provided by the natural environment However unlike private goods environmental goods often cannot be valued by direct reference to any market price This makes economic analysis of the costs and benefits of environmental change problematic Over the past few decades a number of methods have developed to address this problem by attempting to value environmental preferences. Principal among these has been the contingent valuation (CV) method which uses surveys to ask individuals how much they would be willing to pay or willing to accept in compensation for gains and losses of environmental goods. The period from the mid 1980s to the present day has seen a massive expansion in use of the CV method. From its original roots in the USA through Europe and the developed world, the method has now reached worldwide application with a substantial proportion of current studies being undertaken in developing countries where environmental services are often the dominating determinant of everyday living standards. The method has simultaneously moved from the realm of pure academic speculation into the sphere of institutional decision analysis. However, the past decade also witnesses a developing critique of the CV method with a number of commentators questioning the underlying validity of its derived valuations. This volume therefore reflects a time of heated debate as well as from commentators who see it as an interesting experimental tool regardless of the question of absolute validity of estimates. The book embraces the theoretical, methodological, empirical and institutional aspects of the current debate. It covers US, European and developing country applications and the institutional frameworks within which CV studies are applied.

New Frontiers in Comparative Sociology Masamichi S. Sasaki, 2009. This book is a collection of notable papers from the first six volumes of the journal Comparative Sociology. Its content represents leading edge and contemporarily astute analyses in the burgeoning science of comparative sociology, especially relevant to a globalizing world in transition. Given that not everyone is acquainted with comparative sociology, this book offers an opportunity to enlighten readers unfamiliar with the discipline about the importance of comparative sociology to the new world order. Taken together, the articles illuminate various aspects of comparative sociology: a theoretical, methodological, substantive. Some compare social entities in subjective case study fashion while others report on rigorous social research. All contribute in one form or another to describing the many and varied facets of the exciting and new science of comparative sociology. The content of this volume has previously been published in Comparative Sociology volumes 1 to 6.

Experimental Syntax Wayne Cowart, 1997-01-23. This original work provides a concise introduction to methods that linguists may use to describe patterns of sentence acceptability in speech communities. Experimental Syntax will enable an investigator with a well formed question about a matter of fact relative to sentence acceptability to design, execute and analyze an appropriate survey experiment. The book examines variability and demonstrates a method by which an investigator can make principled decisions as to whether individual informants do or do not use a particular dialect. Furthermore, this well formulated book shows how to determine whether two or more informants who use atypical dialects are using the same atypical dialect. Experimental Syntax is recommended to researchers and professionals in linguistics who are interested in learning more about the methods available for dialect and sentence structure studies.

Competing Structures in the Bilingual Mind Elif Bamyacı, 2015-12-28. This volume combines psycholinguistic experiments with typological investigations in order to provide a comprehensive exploration of the linguistic structure of verb number agreement in bilingual speakers with a particular focus on the Turkish language. It takes as its starting point the question of which linguistic structures pose difficulties for bilingual speakers and then proceeds to evaluate the question by using the interface phenomenon of optional verb number agreement. In doing so, this volume investigates how the bilingual mind handles grammatical structures that demand high processing resources, working towards a processing-based linguistic framework for the bilingual mind. Beginning with a thorough survey of the current research of the interface phenomenon in the bilingual mind, the volume then proceeds to present two separate studies on each linguistic interface type, namely semantics-syntax interface and syntax-pragmatics interface, thus filling a number of gaps in the bilingualism research with regards to the interface phenomenon. The results and conclusions of these studies are then integrated with current knowledge and research from the field within a theoretical and processing-based framework in order to explore new psycholinguistic insights for the bilingual mind. Specifically, the conclusion is that the grammar of bilingual speakers is shaped according to cross-linguistic tendencies. Ultimately, it provides a unified account and a comprehensive conclusion regarding the non-native-like patterns in the grammar of bilingual speakers. Serving as a fascinating and timely resource, Competing Structures in the Bilingual Mind: An Investigation of Optional Verb Number Agreement will appeal to bilingualism researchers, clinical linguists, cognitive scientists, experimental linguists, and any linguist specializing in Turkic or Altaic languages.

Elicitation of Preferences Baruch Fischhoff, Charles F. Manski, 2013-03-14. Economists and psychologists have, on the whole, exhibited sharply different perspectives on the elicitation of preferences. Economists, who have made preference the central primitive in their thinking about human behavior, have for the most part rejected elicitation and have instead sought to infer preferences from observations of choice behavior. Psychologists, who have tended to think of preference as a context-determined subjective construct, have embraced elicitation as their dominant approach to measurement. This volume, based on a symposium organized by Daniel McFadden at the University of California at Berkeley, provides a provocative and constructive engagement between economists and psychologists on the elicitation of preferences.
