Individuality in music performance

Bruno Gingras, 2014-10-22 Humans are remarkably adept at identifying individuals on the basis of their facial features or other traits such as gait or vocal timbre Besides voice another auditory medium capable of carrying identity information is music Indeed certain famous musicians such as John Coltrane or Sonny Rollins need only to play a few notes to be unequivocally recognized Along with emotion and structural cues artistic individuality seems to be a key element communicated in music performance Yet the means by which individuality is expressed in performance as well as the cognitive processes employed by listeners to perceive identity cues remain poorly elucidated Other pertinent issues including the connection between a performer's technical competence and ability to convey a specific musical identity as well as potential links between individuality and career defining outcomes such as critical recognition and aesthetic appraisal warrant further exploration Quantitative approaches to the study of music performance have benefited greatly from MIDI technology and the application of computational methods leading to the flourishing of empirical music performance research over the last few decades More recently neuroimaging techniques have provided valuable insights into the neural mechanisms involved in the cognitive processes of performing music Nevertheless this field continues to benefit greatly from qualitative approaches given that the communication of affect and identity cues in music performance leads to a rich subjectivity of impressions that must be accounted for in order to lead to a greater understanding of this multifaceted phenomenon The aim of this Research Topic is to provide a forum for interdisciplinary research broadly related to the expression and perception of individuality in music performance Research methodology includes behavioral psychophysiological and neuroimaging techniques Both quantitative and qualitative approaches are presented The scope of this Research Topic includes laboratory studies as well as studies in real life performance settings and longitudinal studies on performers

The Philosopher's Touch François Noudelmann, 2012-01-03 Renowned philosopher and prominent French critic François Noudelmann engages the musicality of Jean Paul Sartre Friedrich Nietzsche and Roland Barthes all of whom were amateur piano players and acute lovers of the medium Though piano playing was a crucial art for these thinkers their musings on the subject are largely scant implicit or discordant with each philosopher's oeuvre Noudelmann both recovers and integrates these perspectives showing that the manner in which these philosophers played the composers they adored and the music they chose reveals uncommon insight into their thinking styles and patterns Noudelmann positions the physical and theoretical practice of music as a dimension underpinning and resonating with Sartre's Nietzsche's and Barthes's unique philosophical outlook By reading their thought against their music he introduces new critical formulations and reorients their trajectories adding invaluable richness to these philosophers' lived and embodied experiences The result heightens the multiple registers of being and the relationship between philosophy and the senses that informed so much of their work A careful reader of music Noudelmann maintains an elegant command of the texts under his gaze and appreciates the discursive points of musical and philosophical scholarship they involve especially with regard to recent research and cutting edge critique
