Cooperative Research and Development: The Industry—University—Government Relationship Albert N. Link, Gregory Tasse, 1989-05-31 We must all hang together or surely we will all hang separately Benjamin Franklin The significant apathy that characterized relationships between industry and universities and the adversarial nature of relationships between industry and government have both faded rapidly in the 1980s as the realities of global competition have surfaced in the United States Both industry and government leaders articulate a number of constructs for regaining our competitiveness in world markets One of the more frequent strategies prescribed in this new competitiveness era is cooperation Different individuals or groups may espouse different definitions interpretations or areas of emphasis but the overall importance of this concept is substantial Although examples of cooperative research have existed for several decades the number and variety of relationships have expanded rapidly in the 1980s as corporations universities and governments have embraced this strategy Joint ventures involving two or three firms increased from under 200 per year in the 1970s to over 400 per year by the mid 1980s Multiple firm cooperative arrangements are a more recent phenomenon made possible by the National

The Gordian Knot W. Russell Neuman, Richard Jay Solomon, Lee W. McKnight, 1999-07-26 Veterans of the high definition TV wars of the 1980s the authors social scientists as well as technologists came to see themselves as chroniclers and students of an intriguing and serious techno economic conflict Why they asked did so few understand the rules of the game In a broad account accessible to generalist and specialist alike they address the current national debate about the development of a national information infrastructure locating the debate in a broad historical narrative that illuminates how we got here and where we may be going and outlining a bold vision of an open communications infrastructure that will cut through the political gridlock that threatens this information highway Technical change the authors argue is creating a new paradigm that fits neither the free market nor regulatory control models currently in play They detail what is wrong with the political process of the national information infrastructure policy making and assess how different media systems telecommunications radio television broadcasting were originally established spelling out the technological assumptions and organizational interests on which they were based and showing why the old policy models are now breaking down The new digital networks are not analogous to railways and highways or their electronic forebears in telephony and broadcasting they are inherently unfriendly to centralized control of any sort so the old traditions of common carriage and public trustee regulation and regulatory gamesmanship no longer apply The authors technological and historical analysis leads logically toward a policy proposal for a reformed regulatory structure that builds and protects meaningful competition but that abandons its role as arbiter of tariffs and definer of public service and public interest
