Parent Involvement In Children's Education:

Parental Involvement in Childhood Education Garry Hornby, 2011-04-07 Parental participation has long been recognized as a positive factor in children's education. Research consistently shows that parents' contributions to their children's education lead to improvements in their academic and behavioral outcomes from elementary through middle and secondary school. Recognizing the critical role of school psychologists in this equation, Parental Involvement in Childhood Education clearly sets out an evidence-based rationale and blueprint for building parental involvement and faculty awareness. The author's starting point is the gap between the ideals found in the literature and the reality of parental involvement in schools. An ecological analysis identifies professional, institutional, and societal factors that keep schools and parents distant. Methods for evaluating parental involvement are detailed, as is a model for developing and maintaining strong parental relationships at the instructor, school, and education system level, with an emphasis on flexible communication and greater understanding of parents' needs. This empirically sound coverage offers readers a detailed understanding of obstacles to parental involvement, an evidence-based model for parental participation, a three-nation study of parental involvement practices in schools, guidelines for implementing parental involvement activities and initiatives, a review of effective communication strategies with parents, and analysis of key interpersonal skills for effective work with parents. Parental Involvement in Childhood Education is essential reading for practitioners and researchers in school psychology and counseling, social work, and educational psychology, whether they work directly with schools or in providing training for teachers and other professionals who work with children and their parents.

Family Involvement in Children's Education Janie Funkhouser, 1999-02 Describes how some schools and their communities have overcome key barriers, finding the time, increasing their information about each other, bridging school-family differences, improving schools, and tapping external supports to strengthen school-family partnerships. Successful partnerships require the sustained mutual collaboration and support of school staffs and families at home and at school. Business or community groups can also help schools and families to work together. This book is based on case studies of 20 successful education programs around the country. They include elementary and secondary schools and districtwide programs.

Family Involvement in Children's Education Janie E. Funkhouser, Miriam R. Gonzales, 1997 Schools that are most successful in engaging parents and other family members in support of their children's learning look beyond traditional definitions of parent involvement: parent-teacher organizations or signing report cards to a broader conception of supporting families in activities outside of school that can encourage their children's learning. This idea book is intended to assist educators, parents, and policy makers as they develop school-family partnerships, identifying and describing successful strategies used by 20 local Title I programs. Following an executive summary, the book notes resources for involving families in education, includes research supporting such partnerships, and describes how Title I encourages partnerships. Next, the book describes successful local approaches to family involvement in education, organized around strategies for overcoming common barriers to family involvement including 1 overcoming time and resource constraints 2 providing information and training to parents and school staff 3 restructuring schools to support family involvement 4 bridging school family differences and 5 tapping external supports for partnerships Finally the book presents conclusions about establishing and sustaining partnerships noting that at the same time that successful partnerships share accountability specific stakeholders must assume individual responsibility and that those schools that succeed in involving large numbers of parents invest energy in finding solutions for problems not excuses Four appendices present profiles of 10 successful partnerships descriptions in table format of 20 successful local approaches contact information for profiled partnership programs and resources for building successful partnerships Contains 13 references HTH Parent Involvement in Children's Education Nancy Lane Carey, Laurie Lewis, Elizabeth Farris, Shelley Burns, 1998 The findings from the Survey on Family and School Partnerships in Public Schools K 8 which addressed these issues the kinds of commun that schools establish to provide parents PT with info about the goals of the school their children s progress and topics relevant to assist students outside of school the kinds of activities schools sponsor that are designed to inform PT about their children s perform the kinds of volunteer activ schools make avail to PT and the extent to which PT participate in these activities the extent to which PT are included in decisionmaking regarding selected school issues and other factors that influence school efforts to increase PT involve in their children s educ Parent Involvement in Children's Education Nancy Lane Carey, Laurie Lewis, Elizabeth Farris, 1998-09 The findings from the Survey on Family and School Partnerships in Public Schools K 8 which addressed these issues the kinds of commun that schools establish to provide parents PT with info about the goals of the school their children s progress and topics relevant to assist students outside of school the kinds of activities schools sponsor that are designed to inform PT about their children s perform the kinds of volunteer activ schools make avail to PT and the extent to which PT participate in these activities the extent to which PT are included in decisionmaking regarding selected school issues and other factors that influence school efforts to increase PT involve in their children s educ

Parental Involvement and Academic Success , The Broken Compass Keith Robinson,Angel L. Harris,2014-01-06 It seems like common sense children do better when parents are involved in their schooling But does the evidence stack up The Broken Compass puts this question to the test across socioeconomic groups and the surprising finding is that no clear connection exists between parental involvement and improved student performance

Parents, Their Children, And Schools Barbara Schneider,1996-03-22 Parental involvement with children at home in school and in the community is one of the most important factors in educational success Yet we know very little about the most effective approaches to parental intervention Moreover not all parents have the same resources or opportunities to act on the educational expectations they have for their children This book examines the resources available to parents and the actions parents can take to further their children's education. It is the first study of the subject based on major survey data drawing from the National Education Longitudinal Study of 1988, a national survey of 26 000 eighth graders, their parents, teachers, and school administrators. The authors explore several important debates, including the extent to which parental involvement can mitigate the constraints of poverty for minorities and disadvantaged students, school choice and equality of educational opportunity, and the effects that school-sponsored activities involving parents have on educational performance. Certain to change the thinking of educators and policymakers, this book is essential reading for scholars and parents as well.

The Home Environment & School Learning Thomas Kellaghan, 1993-10-19 A happy combination of lucid writing and careful analysis of worldwide research. For both educators and policy makers, it will illuminate the educational roles of families and the potential of families and schools to work together.
