

Treatments Depend on the Allergy

Serious Allergies

Your child's pediatrician may refer your child to an allergist who specializes in children's allergies. In these cases your child may need to carry a special "pen" to inject him or herself with epinephrine in case of a serious attack.

Environmental Allergies

Use common sense to help your child avoid triggers. If your child is allergic to a beloved pet, for example, limit the child's time with the pet.

Other Allergies

Most other allergies can be controlled by avoiding the offending substance as much as possible. Over-the-counter and prescription medications can control symptoms in case of accidental exposure.
