Commission on Population Growth and the American Future,1975      Regional Disparities in Small Countries Daniel Felsenstein,Boris A. Portnov,2005-12-28 1 2 Daniel Felsenstein and Boris A Portnov 1 Department of Geography Hebrew University of Jerusalem Israel 2 Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Management University of Haifa Israel During the Candiot War of 1645 1669 the Ottoman Sultan Ibrahim I ordered his chief admiral to attack Malta Fearing imminent defeat by the superior Venetian forces stationed on the island the admiral decided to trick the sultan out of the idea As the story goes he placed a candle on his naval map allowing the wax to drip on the tiny island until it was completely covered Then he exclaimed in false surprise Malta Yok There is no Malta and convinced the sultan to sail his fleet to the Island of Crete instead Although Malta is not featured in this volume most of the countries it covers are of wax drip size Intuitively it may be expected that everything in small countries is diminutive distances population economies and even regional inequalities Thus at a symposium on The Challenge of Development convened in Israel in 1957 to mark the inauguration of a new building for the Department of Economics at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem the eminent US economist Simon Kuznets stated that developed small states seem to have succeeded in spreading the fruits of economic growth more widely among their populations than the larger states at comparable levels of income per capita      Reference Library of Asian America Susan B. Daniel H. Levine, Dawn Nagar, 2016-05-19 This landmark book is the first of its kind to assess the challenges of African region building and regional integration across all five African sub regions and more than five decades of experience considering both political and economic aspects Leading scholars and practitioners come together to analyze a range of entwined topics including the theoretical underpinnings that have informed Africa's regional integration trajectory the political economy of integration including the sources of different waves of integration in pan Africanism and the reaction to neo liberal economic pressures the complexities of integration in a context of weak states and the informal regionalization that often occurs in borderlands the increasing salience of Africa's relationships with rising extra regional economic powers including China and India and comparative lessons from non African regional blocs including the EU ASEAN and the Southern Common Market A core argument of this book running through all chapters is that region building must be recognized as a political project as much as if not more than an economic one successful region building in Africa will need to include the complex political tasks of strengthening state capacity including states capacity as developmental states that can actively engage in economic planning resolving long standing conflicts over resources and political dominance improving democratic governance and developing trans national political structures that are legitimate and inclusive BLS Report United States. Housing Markets and Housing Institutions: An International Comparison Björn Hårsman,John M. Quigley,2012-12-06 International comparisons of economic institutions and government policies are fraught with difficulties After the selective barriers of language and culture are overcome differences in programs and outcomes are far more subtle than those that can be revealed by highly aggregated national data Relatively soft comparisons are the norm in international comparative research This is particularly true in comparative analyses of housing and the operation of housing markets Housing markets are local or regional in character and the effects of government programs on market outcomes depend upon important economic characteristics of the local environment Moreover the institutions that influence the production distribution and consumption of housing differ enormously across nations The distribution of housing and the role of the market in provision depend upon historical and social factors as well Aggregate national data are unlikely to allow for much depth in comparisons across societies Yet in the absence of such comparisons the very visibility of housing may lead to inadequate or erroneous generalizations Photographs emphasizing the aesthetics of well planned housing agglomerations or urban slums are compelling Documentation that middle class households must wait in a queue for a decade to be housed is notably less graphic      Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare Appropriations for 1963 United
