Source: Authors' Construct, 2013

Regionalism as used in this paper is thus seen as the joint action by jurisdictional authorities to formulate and enforce policy decisions in economic and growth management options that go beyond jurisdictional boundaries and to also complement existing regional and national development initiatives. Explaining this definition, Basha and Cussey (2008) talk of the need for communities to pursue their interests but not at the detriment of others; and be responsible for their own actions by minimizing the harm it imposes on others. Ensuring local participation in the planning process (vertical inclusivity) is one thing, but making local planning authorities collaborate in dealing with common developmental challenges (horizontal inclusivity) is another. Drawing on some key issues in the discussions on regionalism, this paper presents a framework –which integrates regionalism in Ghana's decentralised planning model– as it deals with its urbanisation challenges.

3. Study Context

With a total land area of 238,533 sq km and located between latitudes 4°45' and 12°13' North of the Equator and 1°07' West and 1°14' East of the Greenwich Meridian (Source, Ghana is located at the heart of Western Africa (see Figure 2). It is bordered to the North, South, East and West respectively by Burkina Faso, Gambia and Guinea, Togo, and Côte d'Ivoire. There are 10 regions with each having its capital and 256 Metropolitan/Municipal/District Assemblies (MMEDAs) with their respective capitals as at 2012. Ensuring homogeneity among large cultural groups and also possessing administrative efficiencies are seen to be reasons for establishing these regions (Dickson, 1977) and Chenu, 2005).

Africa and the First World War De-Valera NYM Botchway, Kwame Osei Kwarteng, 2018-10-26 The First World War was a widespread conflagration in world history which despite its European origins had enormous effects throughout the world Fettered to European politics and diplomacy through colonialism Africa could not claim a position of neutrality meaning that it mobilised human and natural resources to support the imperial war effort Fighting both within and outside Africa colonised Africans who were compelled or coaxed by the colonial regimes of the warring European countries fought Europeans and Africans too The soldiers fought with great dedication and contributed significantly to successes attained by the belligerent European colonialists Similarly African non combatants like carriers brought zeal and enthusiasm to difficult wartime tasks The impact of the war on Africa was immense with far reaching consequences in specific colonies and touched the lives of all Africans under colonial rule Although the continent's connections to the war were immense and diverse these experiences are not widely known among scholars and the general public This is because over the years most studies and commemorative events of the war have centred on the European theatre of the war and its outcomes This book brings together interesting essays written by scholars of African history society and military about African experiences of the war It complements and problematises some key themes on Africa and the First World War and offers a stimulating historiographical excursion providing possibilities for reconsidering normative conclusions on the war The volume will be of interest to general readers as well as students and researchers in different areas of scholarship including African history war studies postcolonial studies cultural studies labour history and the history of memory among others

The Politics of Land Tenure Reform in Ghana, 2007

Village Work Alice Wiemers, 2021-05-28 A robust historical case study that demonstrates how village development became central to the rhetoric and practice of statecraft in rural Ghana Combining oral histories with decades of archival material Village Work formulates a sweeping history of twentieth century statecraft that centers on the daily work of rural people local officials and family networks rather than on the national governments and large scale plans that often dominate development stories Wiemers shows that developmentalism was not simply created by governments and imposed on the governed instead it was jointly constructed through interactions between them The book contributes to the historiographies of development and statecraft in Africa and the Global South by emphasizing the piecemeal contingent and largely improvised ways both development and the state are comprised and experienced providing new entry points into longstanding discussions about developmental power and discourse unsettling common ideas about how and by whom states are made exposing the importance of unpaid labor in mediating relationships between governments and the governed showing how state engagement could both exacerbate and disrupt inequities Despite massive changes in twentieth century political structures the imposition and destruction of colonial rule nationalist plans for pan African solidarity and modernization multiple military coups and the rise of neoliberal austerity policies unremunerated labor and demonstrations of local leadership have remained central tools by which rural Ghanaians have interacted with the state Grounding its analysis of statecraft in decades of daily negotiations over budgets and bureaucracy the book tells the stories of developers who decided how and where projects would be sited of constituents who performed labor and of a chief and his large cadre of educated children who met and shaped demands for local leaders For a variety of actors invoking the village became a convenient way to allocate or attract limited resources to highlight or downplay struggles over power and to forge national and international networks

Ethnicity and the Making of History in Northern Ghana Carola Lentz, 2006-07-04 Drawing on two decades of research this social and political history of North Western Ghana traces the creation of new ethnic and territorial boundaries categories and forms of self understanding and represents a major contribution to debates on ethnicity colonialism and the production of history It explores the creation and redefinition of ethnic distinctions and commonalities by African and European actors showing that ethnicity's power derives from a contradiction while ethnic identities purport to be non negotiable creating permanent bonds stability and security the boundaries of the communities created and the associated traits and practices are malleable and adaptable to specific interests and contexts Forthcoming Books Rose Arny, 2003 An Anatomy of Public Policy Implementation Joseph R.
