

NORTH AMERICA

IN THE AGE OF DINOSAURS

By [illegible] and [illegible]

A million years ago, the continent of North America was a vast, unbroken landmass, teeming with life. The air was filled with the roar of dinosaurs, the hum of insects, and the chirp of birds. The land was covered in lush forests, and the oceans were filled with marine life. This was the age of dinosaurs, a time of great change and great discovery.

THE CONTINENTS NEAR UP

The continents of North America and South America were once joined together in a single landmass. This landmass was part of a larger supercontinent called Pangea. The continents were separated by the Atlantic Ocean, which was formed by the movement of the continents.

THE DINOSAURS

Dinosaurs were the dominant land animals of the Mesozoic Era. They were a diverse group of animals, ranging from small, two-legged birds to large, four-legged giants. The dinosaurs lived in a world that was very different from the one we live in today.

THE CLIMATE

The climate of North America during the age of dinosaurs was very different from the one we live in today. It was much warmer, and there were no ice caps. The climate was also much more stable, with no major ice ages.

THE PLANTS

The plants of North America during the age of dinosaurs were very different from the ones we have today. There were no flowering plants, and the forests were made up of large, fern-like trees.

THE FAUNA

The fauna of North America during the age of dinosaurs was very diverse. There were many different types of dinosaurs, as well as other animals like crocodiles, snakes, and birds.

THE GEOLOGY

The geology of North America during the age of dinosaurs was very different from the one we have today. The land was covered in a thick layer of sediment, which was later buried and turned into rock.
