Zombpunk: STEM Christopher Blankley,2012-02-21 Elder Tull is a Puke one of the few unconverted Without a stem he s been discarded by society Forgotten Those converted now fed directly on electricity through a power socket attached to their sternums This cybernetic implant has transformed mankind everyone is beautiful everyone is healthy everyone is thin The stem regulates everything Meanwhile the Pukes are left to scavenge in the gutter their minds burned out by starvation Forced to squabble for what few crumbs remain they ve resigned themselves to living like the walking dead shambling through a world of the eternally young Until the day it all comes crashing down One tiny glitch in the stem and the world goes insane The few Pukes left now face a new threat the mindless snarling jaws of those Stems that had once seemed so perfect With the lights out they re searching for a new source of energy hungry for human flesh Zombpunk STEM is a postmodernist reinterpretation of the classic zombie genre where the ranks of the walking dead are not filled with filthy rotting corpses but the young forever perfect empty husks of a collapsed consumer culture When the world finally runs out of food will the living envy the un dead

Pic-nic Sketches Joseph Clay Neal,1850 Has Science Displaced the Soul? Kevin Sharpe,Rebecca Bryant Bryant,2005-04-29 Can science explain powerful human emotions such as love and happiness Or are these emotions something more than the action of biochemicals and electrical impulses Science is constantly uncovering the mysteries of our nature but we are uneasy about submitting our most intimate feelings to its scrutiny Religion tells us that God is love but neuroscience counters with love as a well timed trickle of transmitters and hormones In the 21st century is it necessary to discard our traditional beliefs of a loving God in favor of dopamine With doctorates in both mathematics and theology Kevin Sharpe explores these notions and asks the question Has Science Displaced the Soul Unflinching in facing these issues Sharpe provides a clear and current summary of the discoveries of science and what our spiritual traditions still have to offer in the ongoing effort to understand our deepest urges He confronts serious unanswered questions How can the Divine direct a random process like evolution How can we reconcile the big bang with creation out of nothing Does it make sense to claim that the non biological Divine shares in human purposes and desires Sharpe s solution is controversial since it requires that we demolish and reconstruct some of our most trusted conceptions By examining the ways in which scientific and religious claims can be harmonized he offers a radical and powerful interpretation of love and happiness in the divine context

The Frenzy the Grievance Leon Miller,2011-12-13 The Frenzy and the Grievance are both narrated by Murray Schenps a retired I R S investigator whos heavily medicated and at times paranoid When the Frenzy opens America is getting ready to invade Iraq and people in New York are still jittery from 9 11 Coming home from his job as a security guard early one morning Murray spots a group of naked people in Chelsea dancing around an open drum Hes disturbed by this are the people drugged sick Is the air poisoned and goes from trying to investigate whats going on as well as checking out a similar event in the West Village where two naked men were killed in the street to writing a book about what he's seen and found out. Doing the book where he makes the leader of the group a possible terrorist, he enlists the aid of a female investigator from the Board of Health and continually argues with a female reporter from The New York Post who is also writing about both problems leading to terrible consequences for Murray and both women. The Grievance opens nearly three years later, right after Abu Ghraib revelations. Murray is now teaching writing in New York, having published his book about what happened earlier but made little money from it. He's still angry at Marlene Ward, The New York Post reporter, and eventually tries to pay her back for the thing she did to ruin his possible career as a writer. When a student submits a manuscript about killing Iraqi prisoners at a black site in New Jersey, Murray tries to find out if it's the truth and not get killed in the process. This leads to confrontations with the soldiers' uncle and Marlene Ward, who gets wind in the story. Again, problems are solved by violence; the grievances that Murray, Paul Jones, and his superiors, as well as Jones' uncle, have been resolved in deadly ways.

Catalogue of Copyright Entries, 1919      The Exhibitor, 1926 Some issues include separately paged sections: Better management, Physical theatre, extra profits, Review Service section.      Spy, 1995-03 Smart, Funny, Fearless. It's pretty safe to say that Spy was the most influential magazine of the 1980s. It might have remade New York's cultural landscape; it definitely changed the whole tone of magazine journalism. It was cruel, brilliant, beautifully written, and perfectly designed and feared by all. There's no magazine I know of that's so continually referenced, held up as a benchmark, and whose demise is so lamented. Dave Eggers: It's a piece of garbage. Donald Trump: DK Top 10 Lisbon.
