ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Alan McDaniel grew up deathly afraid of birds since one fateful day in the park when he was four years old and a pigeon flew down and took the popcorn he was eating right out of his hands and flew away He stayed far away from all birds from that day onwards Well at least until that day he went to the zoo and saw the ring necked parakeets and was awe struck by their beautiful colors and y the fact that they could actually speak He surprised his dad by asking him if he could go closer t to bird cage and actually touch the bird He was tentative at first but after the first touch of those smooth beautiful feathers he was completely in love and his love affair led him to breed them as well as to have them as pets He travels all over the world to find them and photograph them and has a collection of wonderful pictures in a studio that is reserved just for developing and hanging his pictures of his beloved parakeets Albeit he is not obsessed enough to deserve the bird man nickname he has gotten he is certainly in awe of parakeets so much so that he can tell you anything you wish to now about and he could do this even in his sleep The birds love him as much as he loves them and even the ones he gives away to loving homes he still see them as his babies and keep track of them no matter how far away from him they end up having their home
