into core normative values embedded in those classical texts are crucial to the ongoing scholarly discussion about China as China turns more culturally inward. It can also contribute to the spirited contemporary debate about the nature of philosophical reasoning especially in the non-Western traditions. This book offers a new narrative and interpretative framework about the origins of moral political philosophy that tracks how the three normative values—humaneness, justice, and personal freedom—were formulated, reformulated, and contested by early Chinese philosophers in their effort to negotiate the relationship among three distinct domains: the personal, the familial, and the political. Such efforts took place as those thinkers were reimagining a new moral political order, debating its guiding norms, and exploring possible sources within the context of an evolving understanding of Heaven and its relationship with the humans. Tao Jiang argues that the competing visions in that debate can be characterized as a contestation between partialist humaneness and impartialist justice as the guiding norm for the newly imagined moral political order with the Confucians, the Mohists, the Laoists, and the so-called fajia thinkers being the major participants constituting the mainstream philosophical project during this period. Thinkers lined up differently along the justice-humaneness spectrum, with earlier ones maintaining some continuity between the two normative values or at least trying to accommodate both to some extent, while later ones leaning more toward their exclusivity in the political/public domain. Zhuangzi and the Zhuangists were the outliers of the mainstream moral political debate who rejected the very parameter of humaneness versus justice in that discourse. They were a lone voice advocating personal freedom, but the Zhuangist expressions of freedom were self-restricted to the margins of the political world and the interiority of one's heart/mind. Such a take can shed new light on how the Zhuangist approach to personal freedom would profoundly impact the development of this idea in pre-modern Chinese political and intellectual history.

A Short History of Chinese Philosophy Youlan Feng, 1948. A systematic account of Chinese thought from its origins to the present day. Cover Harmony in Chinese Thought Chenyang Li, Dascha Düring, Sai Hang Kwok, 2021-03-10. Harmony has traditionally been a central concept in Chinese thought and to this day continues to shape the way in which people in China and East Asia think about ethics and politics. Yet there is no systematic and comprehensive introduction of harmony as has been variously articulated in different Chinese schools. This edited volume aims to fill this gap. The individual contributions elaborate the conceptions of harmony as these were exemplified in central Chinese schools of thought, including Daoism, Confucianism, Legalism, Mohism, Buddhism, and trace their impact on contemporary Chinese philosophy. The volume explores the various meanings and implications of harmony so as to consider its relevance as a value and virtue in the modern world. It provides an accessible but substantial introductory work for readers interested in learning about pertinent core concepts and theories in Chinese thought as well as engages specialists in Chinese philosophy by explicating its implications for ethical, political, epistemological, and metaphysical reflection as the basic point of reference.
