Mobile Persuasion Design Aaron Marcus, 2015-11-03 Mobile Persuasion Design presents ten conceptual design projects or Machines for new mobile application s smartphone or tablet with Web portals that combine theories of persuasion and information design to change people's behaviour. Areas such as the environment, health, learning and happiness are explored, looking at ways of marrying people's wants and needs to make simple, usable and desirable mobile applications. A user-centred design approach has been used, adopting user experience (UX) methods in depth case studies and market analysis to see what a modern user needs from their mobile application. By applying concepts like persuasion theory and information architecture, try to find ways to satisfy these needs and positively change their user habits. In 2011, the Green Health and Money Machines won design awards in an international competition hosted by the International Institute for Information Design, Vienna.

THE GUIDE Serhii Yakovenko, 2023-05-07. In the house of an elderly dying from sarcoma, oligarch Silin, an unusual guest arrives. He introduces himself as a professor of neurobiology and offers to transplant the old man's consciousness into a young clone. However, there is a catch: during the transplantation, donors experience monstrous, hellish pain that no one can endure. No one except for the conduit, a free human consciousness that once lost its own body. To make everything work, the conduit's consciousness will have to be implanted into Silin's brain.

Love and Other Technologies Dominic Pettman, 2006. Can love really be considered another form of technology? Dominic Pettman says it can, although not before carefully redefining technology as a cultural challenge to what we mean by the human in the information age. Using the writings of such important thinkers as Giorgio Agamben, Jean-Luc Nancy and Bernard Stiegler as a springboard, Pettman explores the tectonic movements of contemporary culture, specifically in relation to the language of eros. Highly ritualized expressions of desire, love, in other words, always reveal an era's attitude toward what it means to exist as a self among others. For Pettman, the articulation of love is a technique of belonging, a way of responding to the basic plurality of everyone's identity, a process that becomes increasingly complex as the forms of mediated communication, from cell phone and text messaging to the mass media, multiply and mesh together. Wrestling the idea of love from the arthritic hands of Romanticism, Pettman demonstrates the ways in which this dynamic assemblage, the stirrings of the soul, have always been a matter of tools, devices, prosthetics and media. Love is, after all, something we make. And love, this book argues, is not eternal but external.

Action and Agency in Dialogue François Cooren, 2010. Elegantly written and compellingly argued, Cooren offers up some of the most original theorizing on agency in the communication sciences that we have seen to date. Nonhuman agency does not just make a difference in this book; it is a difference that connects, communicates and brings to life the impossible.

Gail T. Fairhurst, Professor, University of Cincinnati, USA.

Human Rights Protection Frances Butler, 2021-12-28. All institutions have human rights responsibilities. Some have been set up with this function, and others have had human rights principles thrust upon them. This book explores how different institutions, from state entities, national human rights commissions and the judiciary to the United Nations agencies and international courts, have engaged in human rights protection. There is analysis of their evolution in this role and the methods that they use. Northern Ireland and Bosnia Herzegovina are illustrative of what can happen to human rights when societies are in conflict.

Other chapters consider the development of international criminal law the trouble with treaties and the increasing pressure on corporations to demonstrate social responsibility There is plenty of evidence that human rights protection is as important as ever and this book looks at what is required to achieve this effectively The British Institute of Human Rights aims to further the protection of human rights through education and research It is a charity based at King s College London
