Decision Making in Child Welfare Services T.J. Stein,T.L. Rzepnicki,1984-01-31 All countries confront the problem of providing for dependent neglected and 1 abused children While the exact form of institutional response will differ in relation to a country s political and economic structure its culture and its tradition the same general kinds of child welfare services have been developed 2 everywhere Literature from the United States Canada and several Western European countries reflects a shared concern about children who reside in unplanned substitute care arrangements and a growing recognition of the importance of 3 making permanent plans for these children The American response to this problem took shape in the early 1970s when government at the local state and 4 federal levels undertook to fund permanency planning projects Permanency planning projects were charged with developing and testing procedures that would increase the likelihood that children would move out of substitute care arrangements into permanent family homes either through restoration to their biological families termination of parental rights and subsequent adoption court appointment of a legal guardian or planned emancipation for older children Long term foster care if it was a planned outcome supported by the use of written agreements between foster parents and child care agencies was recognized as an appropriate option for some children 2
