There is a growing body of evidence that the use of a single, standard, non-validated questionnaire to assess the prevalence of depression in the community is inadequate. This is because the prevalence of depression varies with the sensitivity and specificity of the questionnaire used. The prevalence of depression in the community is therefore likely to be underestimated if a single, standard, non-validated questionnaire is used. the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese, but by 2000, that number had risen to 22 percent. In 2008, the number of obese people in the United States was 33 percent, and that number is projected to rise to 36 percent by 2010. The increase in obesity is a major public health concern because obesity is a leading cause of heart disease, diabetes, and other chronic diseases.
