After Broadcast News Bruce A. Williams, Michael X. Delli Carpini, 2011-09-26 The new media environment has challenged the role of professional journalists as the primary source of politically relevant information After Broadcast News puts this challenge into historical context arguing that it is the latest of several critical moments driven by economic political cultural and technological changes in which the relationship among citizens political elites and the media has been contested Out of these past moments distinct media regimes eventually emerged each with its own seemingly natural rules and norms and each the result of political struggle with clear winners and losers The media regime in place for the latter half of the twentieth century has been dismantled but a new regime has yet to emerge Assuring this regime is a democratic one requires serious consideration of what makes or breaks their campaign Targeted outreach on Facebook and Twitter placement of a well timed viral ad and the ability to roll with the memes flame wars and downvotes that might spring from ordinary citizens engagement with the issues these skills are heralded as crucial for anyone hoping to get their views heard in a chaotic election cycle But just how effective are the kinds of media strategies that American politicians employ And what effect if any do citizen created political media have on the tide of public opinion In Controlling the Message Farrar Myers and Vaughn curate a series of case studies that use real time original research from the 2012 election season to explore how politicians and ordinary citizens use and consume new media during political campaigns Broken down into sections that examine new media strategy from the highest echelons of campaign management all the way down to passive citizen engagement with campaign issues in places like online comment forums the book ultimately reveals that political messaging in today s diverse new media landscape is a fragile unpredictable and sometimes futile process The result is a collection that both interprets important historical data from a watershed campaign season and also explains myriad approaches to political campaign media scholarship an ideal volume for students scholars and political analysts alike

The People's News Joseph E. Uscinski, 2014-02-03 Uncovers the surprising cause behind the recent rise of fake news In an ideal world journalists act selflessly and in the public interest regardless of the financial consequences However in reality news outlets no longer provide the most important and consequential stories to audiences instead news producers adjust news content in response to ratings audience demographics and opinion polls While such criticisms of the news media are widely shared few can agree on the causes of poor news quality The People s News argues that the incentives in the American free market drive news outlets to report news that meets audience demands rather than democratic ideals In short audiences opinions drive the content that so often passes off as the news The People s News looks at news not as a type of media but instead as a commodity bought and sold on the market comparing unique measures of news content to survey data from a wide variety of sources Joseph Uscinski s rigorous analysis shows news firms report certain issues over others not because audiences need to know them but rather because of market demands Uscinski also demonstrates that the influence of market demands also affects the business of news prohibiting journalists from exercising independent judgment and determining the structure of entire news markets as well as firm branding Ultimately the results of this book indicate profit motives often trump journalistic and democratic values The findings also suggest that the media actively responds to audiences thus giving the public control over their own information environment Uniting the study of media effects and media content The People s News presents a powerful challenge to our ideas of how free market media outlets meet our standards for impartiality and public service
