Homer's work for pictorial magazines is substantial to say the least. It amounts to some 250 wood engraved images published between 1857 and 1875. These wood engravings are collected assiduously and are exhibited frequently in museums. They differ from Homer's book illustrations in that they are independent from the texts Homer chose and treated the great majority of his magazine subjects much as he did his paintings. They are in essence original works of graphic art. The illustrations reproduced here cover a remarkable range. They constitute the first substantial body of American art about the life of the city streets, the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, abolition and the New Woman. They include compelling treatments of the Civil War, rural childhood and wilderness. They also comprise an essential contribution to the study of one of the masters of American art.

Color Theory Aaron Fine, 2021-08-12. Giving an overview of the history of color theory from ancient and classical cultures to contemporary contexts, this book explores important critical principles and provides practical guidance on the use of color in art and design. Going beyond a simple recitation of what has historically been said about color, artist and educator Aaron Fine provides an intellectual history critiquing prevailing Western ideas on the subject and challenging assumptions. He analyses colonialist and gendered attitudes, materialist and romanticist perspectives, spiritualist approaches to color, color in the age of reproduction and modernist and post-modernist color strategies. Highlighted throughout are examples of the ways in which attitudes towards color have been impacted by the legacy of colonialism and are tied up with race, gender and class. Topics covered include color models, wheels and charts, color interaction and theories of perception, with over 150 images throughout. By placing under examined tenets of color theory such as the color wheel and color primaries within the Western industrial context that generated them, Fine helps you to connect color choices to color meanings and apply theory to practice.
