New Techniques and Technologies in Mining Volodymyr Bondarenko, Irina Kovalevska, Roman Dychkovskiy, 2010-08-09

Mining is the foremost source of minerals that all countries find essential for maintaining and improving their standards of living. Mined materials are needed to construct roads and hospitals, to build automobiles and houses, to make computers and satellites, to generate electricity, and to provide many other goods and services that consumers enjoy. The high tech industries and even the better known resource industries are all dependent in some way on the mining industry. But exploring, extraction and processing of minerals require big material and labour costs and there is a big number of acute problems to face such as environment and water pollution, worsening of mining geological conditions, depletion of minerals that can be extracted only by conventional methods, rock pressure, manifestation of big depths of the deposits and transportation of the minerals on the surface. In order to find modern solutions, there is a big number of scientists and engineers all over the world dedicating their research to most current problems and inventions of innovative technologies and techniques in mining. Some of the most important results of such research is presented in this book and covers the following topics: management of strain and stress state of the massif, underground coal gasification, substantiation of rational parameters of various types of support, ventilation in underground openings, design of mine workings and other vital questions.

New Techniques in Nutritional research Roger Whitehead, 2012-12-02. New Techniques in Nutritional Research contains the proceedings of the Ninth Annual Bristol Myers Squibb Mead Johnson Symposium on Nutrition Research held on September 11-13, 1989 in Cambridge, England. The papers highlight a number of novel techniques that are currently used in nutritional research, including the doubly labeled water method, the labeled bicarbonate method, X-ray computed tomography, neutron activation analysis, magnetic resonance imaging, and the application of stable isotope tracers. Divided into four sections encompassing 20 chapters, this volume begins with an overview of stable isotopes and their applications in nutrition science, including vitamin research and in the investigation of mineral metabolism. It then discusses modern approaches for measuring energy expenditure and body composition, classical and modern methods of anthropometry, measurement of bone mineral content in vivo, and imaging techniques in analysis of bone status. Nutritional scientists will find this book a useful source of information related to the field.

New Techniques of Optical Microscopy and Microspectroscopy Cherry, 1991. The last few years have seen an upsurge of interest in the study of cells by optical microscopy. The advent of new techniques such as confocal microscopy and the availability of extremely sensitive digital imaging devices are revolutionizing the field. A number of groups have developed new ways of making spectroscopic measurements at the microscopic level, accompanied by the introduction of appropriate sensor molecules for cellular assays. The aim of this volume will be to bring together the various advances in order to provide the reader with an up to date account of what can now be achieved with modern optical microscopic methods.

ontologies Thus merely using ontologies like using XML does not reduce heterogeneity it just raises heterogeneity problems to a higher level Euzenat and Shvaiko's book is devoted to ontology matching as a solution to the semantic heterogeneity problem faced by computer systems Ontology matching aims at finding correspondences between semantically related entities of different ontologies These correspondences may stand for equivalence as well as other relations such as consequence subsumption or disjointness between ontology entities Many different matching solutions have been proposed so far from various viewpoints e.g. databases information systems and artificial intelligence The second edition of Ontology Matching has been thoroughly revised and updated to reflect the most recent advances in this quickly developing area which resulted in more than 150 pages of new content In particular the book includes a new chapter dedicated to the methodology for performing ontology matching It also covers emerging topics such as data interlinking ontology partitioning and pruning context based matching matcher tuning alignment debugging and user involvement in matching to mention a few More than 100 state of the art matching systems and frameworks were reviewed With Ontology Matching researchers and practitioners will find a reference book that presents currently available work in a uniform framework In particular the work and the techniques presented in this book can be equally applied to database schema matching catalog integration XML schema matching and other related problems The objectives of the book include presenting i) the state of the art and ii) the latest research results in ontology matching by providing a systematic and detailed account of matching techniques and matching systems from theoretical practical and application perspectives
