Stitching the World: Embroidered Maps and Women's Geographical Education Judith A. Tyner, 2016-12-05 From the late eighteenth century until about 1840 schoolgirls in the British Isles and the United States created embroidered map samplers and even silk globes Hundreds of British maps were made and although American examples are more rare they form a significant collection of artefacts Descriptions of these samplers stated that they were designed to teach needlework and geography The focus of this book is not on stitches and techniques used in drafting the maps but rather why they were developed how they diffused from the British Isles to the United States and why they were made for such a brief time The events of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries stimulated an explosion of interest in geography The American and French Revolutions the wars between France and England the War of 1812 Captain Cook's voyages and the explorations of Lewis and Clark made the study of places exciting and important Geography was the first science taught to girls in school This period also coincided with major changes in educational theories and practices especially for girls and this book uses needlework maps and globes to chart a broader discussion of women's geographic education In this light map samplers and embroidered globes represent a transition in women's education from accomplishments in the eighteenth century to challenging geographic education and conventional map drawing in schools and academies of the second half of the nineteenth century There has been little serious study of these maps by cartographers and moreover historians of cartography have largely neglected the role of women in mapping Children's maps have not been studied although they might have much to offer about geographical teaching and perceptions of a period and map samplers have been dismissed because they are the work of schoolgirls Needlework historians likewise have not done in depth studies of map samplers until recently Stitching the World is an interdisciplinary work drawing on cartography needlework and material culture This book for the first time provides a critical analysis of these artefacts showing that they offer significant insights into both eighteenth and nineteenth century geographic thought and cartography in the USA and the UK and into the development of female education American Samplers Ethel Stanwood Bolton, Eva Johnston Coe, 1921

Defining Visual Rhetorics Charles A. Hill, Marguerite Helmers, 2012-08-21 Images play an important role in developing consciousness and the relationship of the self to its surroundings In this distinctive collection editors Charles A Hill and Marguerite Helmers examine the connection between visual images and persuasion or how images act rhetorically upon viewers Chapters included here highlight the differences and commonalities among a variety of projects identified as visual rhetoric leading to a more precise definition of the term and its role in rhetorical studies Contributions to this volume consider a wide variety of sites of image production from architecture to paintings from film to needlepoint in order to understand how images and texts work upon readers as symbolic forms of representation Each chapter discusses analyzes and explains the visual aspect of a particular subject and illustrates the ways in which messages and meaning are communicated visually The contributions include work from rhetoric scholars in the English and communication disciplines and represent a variety of methodologies theoretical textual analysis psychological research and cultural studies among others The editors seek to demonstrate that every new turn in the study of rhetorical practices reveals more possibilities for discussion and that the recent turn to the visual has revealed an inexhaustible supply of new questions problems and objects for investigation As a whole the chapters presented here demonstrate the wide range of scholarship that is possible when a field begins to take seriously the analysis of images as important cultural and rhetorical forces Defining Visual Rhetorics is appropriate for graduate or advanced undergraduate courses in rhetoric English mass communication cultural studies technical communication and visual studies It will also serve as an insightful resource for researchers scholars and educators interested in rhetoric cultural studies and communication studies
