review was to 1 critically evaluate the accuracy and completeness of the paleoseismictrenching data particularly regarding earthquake timing and displacement 2 where the data permit assign consensus preferred recurrence interval RI and vertical slip rate VSR estimates with appropriate confidence limits to the faults fault sections under review and 3 identify critical gaps in the paleoseismic data and recommend where and what kinds of additional paleoseismic studies should be performed to ensure that Utah s earthquake hazard is adequately documented and understood It is important to note that with the exception of the Great Salt Lake fault zone the Working Group s review was limited to faults fault sections having paleoseismic trenching data Most Quaternary faults fault sections in Utah have not been trenched but many have RI and VSR estimates based on tectonic geomorphology or other non trench derived studies Black and others compiled the RI and VSR
