Arthur Miller was affronted in numerous ways by what he experienced either personally or vicariously through the experiences of others For example By the way his immigrant family had come to financial grief in the Great Depression 1929 to the late 1930s through no fault of their own By the anti-Semitism that existed in the USA and elsewhere in the 1930s culminating in the Nazi Holocaust in which so many people of his own ethnic group the Jews together with millions of other innocents perished By the way he and others including many connected with the arts were persecuted for alleged communist sympathies in the McCarthy witch hunts of the late 1940s and 1950s in the USA By the way that atheism to which he himself subscribed was considered to be subversive and unpatriotic By the way that the American Dream was generally portrayed as something to which everybody could aspire and yet by embracing the concept of the American Dream most people were generally setting themselves up to fail Despite his disillusionment with life Miller strove to illuminate a path to a better way and in doing so offered hope to the inhabitants of the flawed and troubled world in which he found himself not just in the USA but also elsewhere      Text & Presentation, 2008 Stratos E.
