F. Benson,2015-07-13 Excerpt from Mrs Ames Certainly the breakfast tongue which was cut for the first time that morning was not of the pleasant reddish hue which Mrs Altham was justified in expecting considering that the delicacy in question was not an ordinary tinned tongue you had to take things as you found them if your false sense of economy led you to order tinned goods but one that came out of a fine glass receptacle with an eminent label on it It was more of the colour of cold mutton unattractive if not absolutely unpleasant to the eye while to the palate it proved to be singularly lacking in flavour Altogether it was a great disappointment and for this reason when Mr Altham set out at a quarter past twelve to stroll along to the local club in Queensgate Street with the ostensible purpose of seeing if there was any fresh telegram about the disturbances in Morocco his wife accompanied him to the door of that desirable mansion round which was grouped a variety of chained up dogs in various states of boredom and irritation and went on into the High Street in order to make in person a justifiable complaint at her grocer s She would be sorry to have to take her custom elsewhere but if Mr Pritchard did not see his way to sending her another tongue of course without further charge she would be obliged About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Mrs. Ames E.F.
