Green, David R.

Bellwood, 2009 This document provides practical advice to field practitioners based on an example from the Asia Pacific Region Key functional groups of herbivores are identified species are assigned to each functional group and methods are provided for monitoring their abundance biomass and size structure This document represents the first attempt to develop a monitoring program that is specifically designed to monitor key functional groups of herbivorous reef fishes as indicators of coral reef resilience Even though it is based on the best available information it is important to remember that the science underpinning these methods is still new and developing Further research is now required to address knowledge gaps and refine monitoring methods Executive summary Diversity of Coral-Associated Fauna Simone Montano, 2020-11-03 Coral reefs are acknowledged for the beauty of their organisms which has made this natural ecosystem one of the most appreciated on Earth It is believed to be the richest in terms of species diversity and species interactions at least in theory since there is yet much documentation work to be done Indeed the paradox is that of the estimated one million species living in this ecosystem globally only 10% of them have been described To date most of the coral reef studies have focused on the most peculiar and fabulous groups such as corals and fishes although most of the diversity is usually represented by small colored camouflaged hidden and crypto organisms from all kingdoms of life The mystery of their diversity ecology biology and importance in the functioning of coral reefs motivate many scientists to dive all around the world in order to discover name and appreciate such a fascinating but unfortunately overlooked component of nature This book is a very nice illustration of the charm of the coral associated fauna
