Global Change: Impacts on Water and food Security Claudia Ringler, Asit K. Biswas, Sarah Cline, 2010-01-19 In recent years a greater level of integration of the world economy and an opening of national markets to trade has impacted virtually all areas of society The process of globalization has the potential to generate long term benefits for developing countries including enhanced technology and knowledge transfers and new financing options supporting agricultural and economic development However risks of political and economic instability increased inequality and losses in agricultural income and production for countries that subsidize their agricultural and other economic sectors threaten to offset potential benefits Globalization can also have a profound impact on the water sector in terms of allocation and use of water and thus on food security as well Other global change processes particularly climate change are also likely to have far reaching impacts on water and food security and societies around the world To discuss these issues in depth the International Food Policy Research Institute the Third World Centre for Water Management Mexico and the Tropical Agricultural Research and Higher Education Center CATIE Costa Rica held a three day International Conference on Globalization and Trade Implications for Water and Food Security at CATIE s Turrialba Costa Rica headquarters under the auspices of the CGIAR Challenge Program on Water and Food in 2005 The workshop set out to identify the major risks and emerging issues facing developing countries related to global economic and environmental change impacts on water and food security

Water Law, Poverty, and Development Philippe Cullet,2009-07-16 This monograph comprehensively examines water law regulations and reform in the present decade going beyond a simple analysis of existing water law and regulations to encompass environmental social economic and human rights aspects of water as a natural resource Using the specific case of India and on the related international law and policy framework that directly influences water regulatory developments in India this book offers what will be the first and only analysis of water law reforms taking place at the national level in many developing countries in their domestic and international context On the one hand international freshwater law remains under developed and existing legal instruments such as the 1997 UN Convention only address a limited set of relevant issues Yet the international law and policy framework concerning freshwater is increasingly important in shaping up law reforms taking place at the national level in particular in developing countries Indeed non binding resolutions such as the Dublin Statement on Water and Sustainable Development 1992 have had an immense influence on water law reforms in most developing countries This book seeks to conceive of and analyse freshwater regulation in a broader context and go beyond a literature that either lauds or criticises ongoing water sector reforms to provide an analytical basis for the reforms which all countries will have to adopt in the near or medium term future
