practitioner has been given little or no space to theorise and orient the future of the field in Africa. Instead, European and American curriculum theorists have been allowed to exert a marked influence on the nature and direction of African theoretical and philosophical underpinnings. This situation raises fundamental questions about the future of education in Africa, and this volume explores and answers these questions relating to curriculum theory, theorising, and the theoriser by breaking traditions and experimenting on alternative approaches and pathways. A Field Guide to the Tiger Beetles of the United States and Canada David L. Pearson, C. Barry Knisley, Daniel Paul Duran, Charles J. Kazilek, 2015. More than 2600 species of tiger beetles are found all over the world. In North America, there are 116 species of tiger beetle divided into 153 geographically distinct races. Detailed studies of their natural history, population dynamics, communities, patterns of worldwide species richness, and taxonomy of particular subgroups have produced much information. Tiger beetles are among the most widely investigated groups of insects, especially in terms of their ecology and geographic distribution. The first edition of A Field Guide to the Tiger Beetles of the United States and Canada published in 2005 has served as a field and natural history guide to all known species of tiger beetles found in North America above the Mexican border. The 2nd edition is a pleasant and comprehensible handbook of the identification, distribution, natural history, and habitat details of the 116 species of tiger beetles in North America. The updated handbook provides new information, including observations of seasonality, range extensions, and biology; a newly developed list of common names; and twenty-five artistically pleasing identification color plates. The second edition of A Field Guide to the Tiger Beetles of the United States and Canada provides essential information to recognize and easily identify tiger beetles for established naturalists and outdoor enthusiasts alike.
