

Safety Through Design

Key Points

- Safety must begin long before construction ever starts.
- Safety is best achieved by eliminating hazards, not just managing and mitigating them.
- Expanding our basis of design to eliminate hazards holds great promise.

Leading owner organizations are continuing to drive safety performance improvement.

- Increasingly they will represent industry's platinum clients.

Over the years these leading owners have driven safety focus up a value chain that:

- Started with mandatory usage of PPE (personal protective equipment).
- Has administrative controls founded on training and work scheduling.
- Has engineering controls providing isolation, separation, and guarding.
- Through substitution, is driving the industry to use something else or do it a different way.

These safety focused industry leaders are now at the apex of this value chain, namely, designing out the hazard.
