Theories of Human Development Michael G. Green, John A. Piel, 2015-07-14 The authors have grouped the theories into three classical families which differ in their views relative to the prime motives underlying human nature They show how theories are specific examples of more general points of view called paradigms The theories chosen to represent the three paradigms the Endogenous Paradigm Exogenous Paradigm and the Constructivist Paradigm were selected because they met four criteria importance as judged by academic and research psychologists fertility as judged by the amount of research the theory has generated scope as judged by the variety of phenomena the various theories explain family resemblance as judged by how well each theory represents its paradigm The authors present the paradigm case in the lead chapter for each paradigm This paradigm case is the best example for the paradigm The authors explain why paradigm cases are important and give them more detailed treatment than other theories in the same paradigm

The Sexual Matrix Sam Kash Kachigan, 1990 Substituting superficial controversy for critical analysis Kachigan offers a crude socio biological treatment of sex gender and style and concludes that the greater variation in female appearance is due to their competition for a limited number of desirable males Published by Radius Press PO Box 1271 FDR Station New York NY 10150 RC Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR

The Civilization of Illiteracy Mihai Nadin, 1997 Phenomena related to the transition from a literacy dominated civilization to one of various means of expression and communication are at the center of his book The fall of totalitarian regimes the current structural difficulties of the European Community the burden of state bureaucracies the world wide effort of re engineering and the global economy are part of the bigger picture of a necessary development
