Sexual Revolutions Jane Peterson, 2002 The change from the hunting gathering lifestyle to one dependent upon farming constitutes a truly revolutionary event in the human career Most archaeologists agree that the way in which ancient people organized their work and family groups were crucial to the success of early attempts at farming This is a study of the historical sexual division of labour As a case study Jane Peterson chose the southern Levant of West Asia where the world's first farming societies emerged some 10 000 years ago Seeking to shatter long held assumptions about women's work that lead to generalizations about gender roles Peterson shows that gender studies can be both scientific and grounded in feminist theory

The Invisible Sex J. M. Adovasio, Olga Soffer, Jake Page, 2016-09-16 Shaped by cartoons and museum dioramas our vision of Paleolithic times tends to feature fur clad male hunters fearlessly attacking mammoths while timid women hover fearfully behind a boulder Recent archaeological research has shown that this vision bears little relation to reality J M Adovasio and Olga Soffer two of the world s leading experts on perishable artifacts such as basketry cordage and weaving present an exciting new look at prehistory With science writer Jake Page they argue that women invented all kinds of critical materials including the clothing necessary for life in colder climates the ropes used to make rafts that enabled long distance travel by water and nets used for communal hunting Even more important women played a central role in the development of language and social life in short in our becoming human In this eye opening book a new story about women in prehistory emerges with provocative implications for our assumptions about gender today Landscape History of Hadramawt Michael J.
