book presents recent theorizing and examples of research which have investigated innovative approaches to assessment using data systems in early years settings It represents both early childhood and junior primary contexts and includes research which focusses on teachers perspectives and reflections on use of data systems It also examines research which reflects on what children gain from being involved in these data systems

Movement and Action in Learning and Development Ida Stockman,2004-08-13 This book presents theories and clinical practices for dealing with children diagnosed with pervasive developmental disability or PDD These are children who have a wide range of disabilities that affect their participation in even the most routine events of daily life such as eating dressing bathing and so on Unlike many who are diagnosed with classic autism however these children seem to have normal social behavior normal physical appearance the ability to learn hear see and move their bodies at will in other words none of the well known reasons that cause autistic and other children to develop differently These children have the use of all their senses but their brains are unable to process the information that is fed through them While much new research is being done in genetics and neurobiology to explain why something in these children has gone fundamentally wrong with their development clinicians and therapists who deal with them on a daily basis have needed to develop practical therapies based on how the children react to their environments Movement and Action in Learning and Development suggests that when therapists plan treatment strategies children s experiences and interactions with the world should be given the same consideration as the limits of their biological makeups Too often children diagnosed with PDD are lumped into therapy groups for the classically autistic where the focus tends to be on the distance senses hearing and vision Case studies presented in the first half of the book suggest that for children with PDD there is a disconnect between the brain and the tactile kinesthetic senses that involve body movement and physical interaction with the world Movement in turn seems to be connected to perception interpretation of the world around and ultimately the acquisition of knowledge For children with PDD normal learning seems to be limited not only by their tactile kinesthetic sense but also by the lack of collaboration between all the senses The second half of the book demonstrates how these new theories translate into clinical practices

Early Childhood Education Redefined Pat Preedy,Kay Sanderson,Sir Christopher Ball,2018-06-14 Probing the shortcomings of contemporary early years provision whilst offering practical and informed solutions Early Childhood Education Redefined at once celebrates the progress made in this field since the publication of the Start Right Report 1994 whilst also calling for further changes to ensure that all children are able to start right to become effective independent learners Developing and emphasising the importance of concepts which have become overlooked within modern educational policy and practice yet which remain key to our children s development this book considers how elements such as attachment and love movement and exercise and language and talk may be better integrated into early years practice via the three main vectors of parenting the curriculum and pedagogy From a revised curriculum from birth to seven renamed Key Stage 1 to a greater emphasis on formative assessment and the promotion of pedagogies including purposeful play planning in the moment and attachment theory chapters build on the principles set out in the Start Right Report and take into consideration the research and reflection developed over the last quarter of a decade Reopening a vital debate and challenging governments education providers parents and professionals to re define what young children need to grow develop and learn in our contemporary society this timely response to the Start Right Report is essential reading for all those involved in early years research education and care
