

An aerial photograph of the University of Virginia campus during autumn. The central feature is the Rotunda, a large building with a prominent white dome and a portico with columns. It is connected by a long, straight walkway to the Old Cabell Hall, a long, two-story building with a red roof. To the left, there are more buildings and a large, vibrant orange tree. The surrounding landscape is filled with trees in various shades of green, yellow, and red, indicating the fall season. The sky is a deep blue.

Featuring a new introduction by the author the paperback edition of Games Colleges Play chronicles the history of intercollegiate athletics from 1910 to 1990 from the early glory days of Knute Rockne and the Gipper to the modern era of big budgets powerful coaches and pampered players John Thelin describes how sports programs although seldom accorded official mention with teaching and research in the university mission statement have become central to university life As administrators search for a proper balance between athletics and academics Thelin observes this peculiar institution grows increasingly powerful and controversial Thelin examines the 1929 Carnegie Foundation Report the formation of major athletic conferences the national college basketball scandals after World War II the dissolution of the Pacific Coast Conference in the 1950s and the Knight Foundation Report of 1991 He finds disturbing patterns of abuse and limited reform and explores the implications of these patterns for today's college presidents faculty and students Games Colleges Play provides historical background that will inform current policy discussions about the proper place of intercollegiate athletics within the American university
