China, Mass Political Participation in Communist China James Roger Townsend, 1965 Political Participation in Beijing Tianjian Shi, 1997 In this first scientific survey of political participation in the People's Republic of China Tianjian Shi identifies twenty eight participatory acts and groups them into seven areas voting campaign activities appeals adversarial activities cronyism resistance and boycotts What he finds will surprise many observers Political participation in a closed society is not necessarily characterized by passive citizens driven by regime mobilization aimed at carrying out predetermined goals Beijing citizens acknowledge that they actively engage in various voluntary participatory acts to articulate their interests In a society where communication channels are controlled by the government Shi discovers access to information from unofficial means becomes the single most important determinant for people's engaging in participatory acts Government sponsored channels of appeal are easily accessible to ordinary citizens so socioeconomic resources are unimportant in determining who uses these channels Instead voter turnout is found to be associated with the type of work unit a person belongs to subjective evaluations of one's own economic status and party affiliation Those most likely to engage in campaign activities adversarial activities cronyism resistance and boycotts are the more disadvantaged groups in Beijing While political participation in the West fosters a sense of identification the unconventional modes of participation in Beijing undermine the existing political order Social Media and Political Participation in Vietnam Viet Tho Le, Tuong-Minh Ly-Le, Lam Ha, 2024-12-21 This book explores the nexus between social media use among young people and political participation in Vietnam which presents a novel case example for examining whether social media can expand the public sphere to become involved in everyday politics With an estimated 72 million Vietnamese on Facebook the country is the seventh largest user base in the world This social media platform alone has created a virtual public sphere outside of and beyond the scope of the ruling Communist Party and its state owned media outlets The authors analyse the paradox of a complicated balancing act of digital participation in an authoritarian state promoting a new understanding of social media in non Western societies The book generates a considerable body of empirical findings relating to political engagement amongst the youth in the digital age and develops the theory of the public sphere beyond Habermas within this context In its examination of the role of social media in society and in political communication generally and the role of social media in authoritarian states specifically this book is of interest to students and scholars researching social media political communication and media theories It is also relevant to those studying the intersection of media and politics in Southeast Asia and in authoritarian states globally Political Participation and Ethnic Minorities Amy L. Freedman, 2002-05-03 From

New York City's Chinatown to urban Indonesia there are fifty five million ethnic Chinese living outside of China. Their strong sense of community along with their considerable economic clout makes them a compelling group with which to study immigrant political participation. Amy Freedman's empirical study examines the hows and whys of Chinese overseas political activity in three diverse countries. When and under what conditions do immigrants become active in the political process? Does political influence stem from group mobilization? What role do communal organizations and their leaders play in determining participation? In answering these questions, Freedman assesses the goals and objectives of ethnic communities entering the political fray. Popular Political Support in Urban China Jie Chen, 2004. On the basis of three carefully drawn surveys of Beijing residents between 1995 and 1999, the author finds that diffuse support for the current political system based on attitudes toward institutions and values remains strong at least among city dwellers though it is gradually declining.
