Worse she's sure Kira wasn't the murderer's first victim. Since he was never caught she's also sure Kira wasn't his last and she's dead set on figuring out his identity. Months away from her eighteenth birthday the course of Danielle's life is altered once again when her father forces her to move across the country to live with her estranged mother, a wealth-obsessed narcissist with nothing but complaints when it comes to her daughter. Complaints that send Danielle's self-esteem spiraling and put her at odds with Michael Beller, the one person she's finally found a connection with. But Michael has no idea how far Danielle has taken her obsession with catching child killers or that she's caught the attention of the very one she's been looking for all along. As the ninth anniversary of Kira's death approaches, Danielle is unraveling. Michael wants every drop of her attention but so does Kira's murderer and he gets it every time he baits her. While she keeps secrets to protect those she cares about, one thing is certain: she's putting everyone at risk, most of all herself.

The Digitalisation of Memory Practices in China Maximilian Mayer, Frederik Schmitz, 2025-09-29 How is memory in China curated in the digital era? This pioneering volume investigates the transformation of collective memory in China amid rapid technological change. Introducing the concept of the curating state, it reveals how digitalisation both supports and challenges official memories, giving rise to more hybrid and at times democratised memory practices. Bringing together leading Chinese and international scholars, the book examines the use of digital tools by state, private and commercial actors to curate their own versions of the past. Combining theoretical innovation with rich empirical research, this is a vital resource for understanding the dynamic interplay between memory, media and power in contemporary China and beyond.
