Shabbir Cheema, Dennis A. Rondinelli, 2007-08-01 The trend toward greater decentralization of governance activities now accepted as commonplace in the West has become a worldwide movement This international development largely a product of globalization and democratization is clearly one of the key factors reshaping economic political and social conditions throughout the world Rather than the top down centralized decision making that characterized communist economies and Third World dictatorships in the twentieth century today's world demands flexibility adaptability and the autonomy to bring those qualities to bear In this thought provoking book the first in a new series on Innovations in Governance experts in government and public management trace the evolution and performance of decentralization concepts from the transfer of authority within government to the sharing of power authority and responsibilities among broader governance institutions This movement is not limited to national government it also affects subnational governments NGOs private corporations and even civil associations The contributors assess the emerging concepts of decentralization e g devolution empowerment capacity building and democratic governance They detail the factors driving the movement including political changes such as the fall of the Iron Curtain and the ascendance of democracy economic factors such as globalization and outsourcing and technological advances e g increased information technology and electronic commerce Their analysis covers many different contexts and regions For example William Ascher of Claremont McKenna College chronicles how decentralization concepts are playing out in natural resources policy while Kadmeil Wekwete United Nations outlines the specific challenges to decentralizing governance in sub Saharan Africa In each case contributors explore the objectives of a decentralizing strategy as well as the benefits and difficulties that will likely result

Rural Electrification Hisham Zerriffi, 2010-11-08 For those in developed nations suddenly being without electricity is a disaster power cuts have us fretting over the food stored in the freezer and even a few hours without lights televisions or air conditioning is an ordeal However for an estimated 1.6 billion people worldwide the absence of electricity is their daily experience. An untold number of others live with electricity that is erratic and of poor quality. How can electric power be brought into their lives when the centralized utility models that have evolved in developed nations are not an economically viable option? Poor rural communities in developing nations cannot simply be plugged in to a grid. Small scale Distributed Generation (DG) ranging from individual solar home systems to village level grids run off diesel generators could provide the answer and this book compares around 20 DG enterprises and projects in Brazil, Cambodia and China, each of which is considered to be a business model for distributed rural electrification. While large centralized power projects often rely on big subsidies, this study shows that privately run and localized solutions can be both self-sustaining and replicable. Its three sections provide a general introduction to the issue of electrification and rural development, set out the details of the case studies and compare the models involved and discuss the important thematic issues of equity, access to capital and cost recovery. Hisham Zerriffi shows that in each case it is not simply a matter of matching a particular technology to a particular need. Numerous institutional factors come into play including the regulatory regime, access to financial services and government utility support or opposition to the DG alternative. Despite this, in many countries the question is not whether DG has a role to play. Rather, it is a question of how it will play a role.

Policy, Program and Project Evaluation Anwar Shah, 2020-11-02 Evaluation in recent decades has evolved from a tool for project appraisals to a more widely used framework for public decision making and operational management. Most evaluation books are focused on traditional tools of analysis such as cost effectiveness and cost benefit analysis to the neglect of modern tools such as multi-criteria evaluation, social marginal cost of funds analysis, data envelopment analysis, results oriented management and evaluation and theory based evaluations. This edited volume provides an easily accessible and comprehensive survey of both traditional and modern tools of analysis that are used in the evaluation literature to evaluate public projects, programs, policies and policy analysis and advice. Reasserting the Rural Development Agenda Arsenio Molina Balisacan,2003-08-01 The agricultural sector s perceived importance in the international development circle waned dramatically after the 1980s and investments in rural development and agricultural research and development declined sharply. This volume reasserts the role of agricultural and rural development in the economic development debate. By revisiting the evolution of ideas, paradigms and empirical evidence and by drawing on Asian experiences, the book intends to set a reinvigorated agenda on agricultural and rural development both for research and policy discussions in the coming decades. Written by internationally acknowledged research scholars, this book is helpful to a wide range of audience including researchers, policymakers, practitioners and students interested in rural development in Asia and its future evolutions.

Reforming Intergovernmental Fiscal Relations and the Rebuilding of Indonesia James Alm, Jorge Martinez-Vazquez, Sri Mulyani Indrawati, 2005-01-01. Indonesia is currently facing some severe challenges both in political affairs and in economic management. One of these challenges is the recently enacted decentralization program now well underway which promises to have some wide ranging consequences. This edited volume presents original papers written by a select group of widely recognized and distinguished scholars that take a hard objective look at the many effects of decentralization on economic and political issues in Indonesia. There are many questions about this program: how will it be implemented? Is there capacity at the local level to implement its reforms? Is there sufficient local political accountability to make it work? and how will the decentralization affect the broader program of economic growth and stabilization? Topics covered include the historical and political dimensions of decentralization, its macroeconomic effects, its effects on poverty alleviation, the assignment of expenditure and revenue functions across levels of government, the design of transfers, the role of natural resource taxation and the effects of local government borrowing. An authoritative comprehensive collection. Reforming Intergovernmental Fiscal Relations and the Rebuilding of Indonesia will be of interest to economists and policy makers as well as students of public finance, development and Asian economics.

The report describes and analyses housing finance conditions and trends in all regions of the world, including formal housing finance mechanisms, microfinance and community funding, highlighting their relevance to the upgrading of slums. Recent shelter finance policy development is discussed at the international and national levels and directions that could be taken to strengthen shelter finance systems are examined.

Can Local Institutions Reduce Poverty? Paula Donnelly-Roark, Karim Ouedraogo, Xiao Ye, 2001. The authors present evidence that in Burkina Faso, certain high performing local institutions contribute to equitable economic development. They link reduced levels of poverty and inequality to a high degree of internal village organization. The structure of these high performing local organizations means they can exist in a number of African countries because they depend more on internal participation rather than on any one country's cultural assets.
