overworked teachers who are trying to keep their heads above water while meeting the myriad demands placed upon them in a climate of high stakes testing This is a story about the disconnect between those who mandate educational policy like superintendents and school boards and the teachers who are expected to implement those policies often with little or no input and few resources This is ultimately a story however about how the institution of education itself operates in a post racial and post gendered society

The Social Psychology of Collective Action Sara Breinlinger, Caroline Kelly, 2014-04-23 In recent years there has been a growth of single issue campaigns in western democracies and a proliferation of groups attempting to exert political influence and achieve social change In this context it is important to consider why individuals do or don't get involved in collective action for example in the trade union movement and the women's movement Social psychologists have an important contribution to make in addressing this question The social psychological approach directly concerns the relationship between the individual and society and a number of theories have been developed in the field particularly by contemporary European researchers Yet surprisingly there has never been until now a concerted attempt to bring these various strands of research together in a coherent detailed presentation of the social psychological approach to collective action The authors of The Social Psychology of Collective Action review and integrate a number of theories developed in this field as well as presenting their own original research and data The research discussed in the book ranges over a number of different contexts with a particular focus on women's groups organizing around issues of gender Questions addressed include why do women get involved in women's groups What part is played by experiences of discrimination in the family and in the workplace What are the benefits of group involvement How are feminist activists perceived by others who choose not to get involved Findings from questionnaires and interviews are integrated with contemporary social psychological theory especially social identity theory

Female Voices from the Worksite Marquita R. Walker, 2020-11-24 This collection analyzes women's narratives on the workplace. These narratives speak to the daily struggles women face in the workforce such as inflexible and long work hours, masculine workplace cultures, employers' stereotypical attitudes, and the absence of work-life balance initiatives. Viewed from a sociological perspective, the authors emphasize the reoccurring themes of devaluation, exploitation, and dehumanization of female workers resulting from unconscious or implicit bias, which directly impacts women's quality of life.

Consuming Work Yasemin Besen-Cassino, 2014-02-21 Youth labor is an important element in our modern economy, but as students' consumption habits have changed, so too have their reasons for working. In Consuming Work, Yasemin Besen-Cassino reveals that many American high school and college students work for social reasons, not monetary gain. Most are affluent suburban white youth employed in part-time jobs at places like the Coffee Bean, so they can be associated with a cool brand, hangout with their friends, and get discounts. Consuming Work offers a fascinating picture of youth at work and how jobs are marketed to these students. Besen-Cassino also shows how the roots of gender and class inequality in the labor force have their beginnings in this critical labor sector. Exploring the social meaning of youth at work and providing critical insights into labor and the youth workforce, Consuming Work contributes a deeper understanding of the changing nature of American labor.

Male and Female Violence in Popular Media Elisa Giomi, Sveva Magaraggia, 2022-10-06 Male and Female Violence in Popular Media brings into focus the apparently symmetrical phenomena of men's violence against women and women's violence against men, explaining the profound differences in their actual features as well as in their representations, which over the last few years have been proliferating in a vast array of global media contents. Elisa Giomi and Sveva Magaraggia consider popular media including crime TV series such as The Killing (Denmark 2007-2012), The Fall (UK 2013-2016), and True Detective USA (2015), factual entertainment such as Who the Bleep Did I Marry? (Investigation Discovery 2010-2015), and Italian pop music, in order to examine popular culture's depictions of men and women in their opposite yet complementary roles of perpetrators and victims. They reveal how TV shows, pop songs, news, and commercials that populate global audiences' daily life fuel false beliefs about love and sexuality that either legitimize or stigmatize violence, depending on the perpetrators and victims' gender.

Paradoxes of Gender Judith Lorber, 1994-01-01 In this pathbreaking book, a well-known feminist and sociologist who is also the Founding Editor of Gender, why transvestites, transsexuals, and hermaphrodites do not affect the conceptualization of two genders and two sexes in Western societies; why most of our cultural images of women are the way men see them and not the way women see themselves; why all women in modern society are expected to have children and be the primary caretaker; why domestic work is almost always the sole responsibility of wives, even when they earn more than half the family income; why there are so few women in positions of authority when women can be found in substantial numbers in many occupations and professions; why women have not benefited from major social revolutions.

Lorber argues that the whole point of the gender system today is to maintain structured gender inequality to produce a subordinate class women that can be exploited as workers sexual partners childbearers and emotional nurturers Calling into question the inevitability and necessity of gender she envisions a society structured for equality where no gender racial ethnic or social class group is allowed to monopolize economic educational and cultural resources or the positions of power
