European Dept.,2017-07-14 This paper highlights the fact that to address the challenge of declining working age population policies should not only aim to support fertility but also to increase labor force participation rate to improve labor allocation across sectors and to encourage net immigration However with some recent measures going in the opposite direction even such mitigating policies may not fully offset the demographic headwinds Poland faces profound demographic changes The decline of fertility rate and growing life expectancy mostly driven by longevity of older cohorts will significantly change the demographic landscape Demographics may soon pose a barrier for growth The historical expansion of working age population appears to have been only partly utilized to boost potential growth with increased unemployment and declined labor force participation rates dampening potential gains Net migration was also a drag on the labor supply in the past but this has changed recently In addition to a steady outflow of permanent migrants there was a sharp pickup in temporary migration after EU accession Poland Today, the State of the Republic Carney,1981-09 Poland's Foreign and Security Policy Ryszard Zięba,2019-11-06 This book analyses determinants and the evolution of Poland's foreign and security policy in the changing international order By studying historical geopolitical and domestic factors the author offers a better understanding of Poland's national interests and sheds new light on its foreign relations with the USA Russia and the European Union Furthermore the author also discusses Poland's cooperation within international organisations such as NATO and the EU Journal of the Senate of the United States of America United States.
